

Russia Continues Aid To China After Treaty With Japan

Ernest Hemingway Finds Strange Mixture of Nationalities in Far Eastern Struggle.

By ERNEST HEMINGWAY.
HONGKONG—On the day the Japanese-Soviet neutrality pact was signed in Moscow, Dr. H. H. Kung, who is both prime minister and minister of finance for his brother-in-law, Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, was dining with Soviet Ambassador Painushkin in Chungking.
"We hear that a pact is going to be signed," the Chinese statesman said.
"Yes," the Soviet ambassador answered. "That is true."
"What will be the effect of such a pact on Russian aid to China?"
"None," answered the Soviet ambassador.
"Will you withdraw any troops from the Manchukuo frontier?"

Frontier Reinforced.

"We will reinforce our divisions there," the Soviet ambassador said, and the head of the Soviet military advisers in China, a lieutenant general, nodded agreement.
At the time that incident happened I did not care to write it because diplomats rarely impart bad news over the dinner table and it was possible that very different news might come out of Moscow. But since then I have heard directly from both Dr. Kung and Madame Chiang Kai-shek that Russian aid is continuing to arrive and that no Soviet staff officers, aviation instructors, or military advisers have been withdrawn from the generalissimo's army.

My wife and I had lunched with Madame Chiang Kai-shek the day the pact was announced and during the conversation she said, "But how will we know whether they will really withdraw aid or not?"

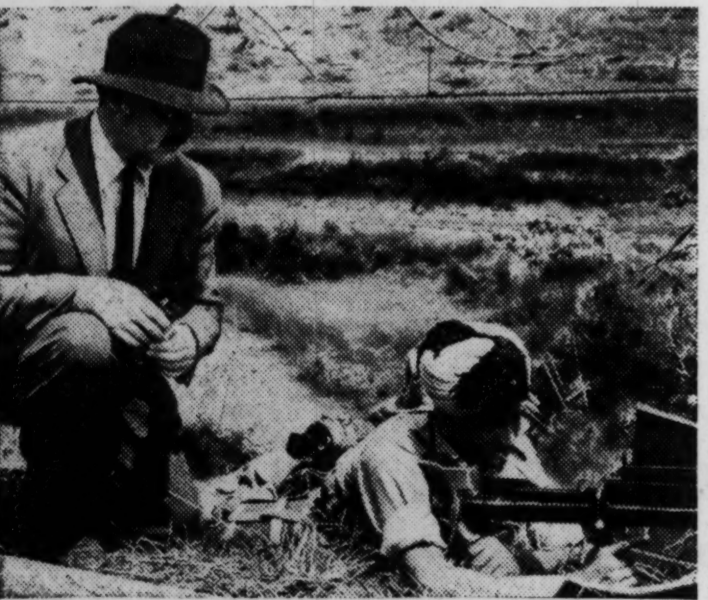

No Withdrawal Evident.

"If they are going to withdraw aid—," I told her, remembering how it had happened in Spain, "the first move will be to withdraw the military advisers, the instructors and the staff officers. As long as they stay on it means the aid will continue."

Last week a letter from Madame Chiang Kai-shek contained these four paragraphs:

"I am fulfilling my promise to inform you of the generalissimo's reaction to the neutrality pact between the U. S. S. R. and Japan.

"The generalissimo declares that this pact will not have the slightest effect on China's determination to continue national resistance. We began it single-handedly, and, if necessary, we shall end it the same way. What other nations, friendly or otherwise, may or may not do, will not influence us to fight on until victory is won.

"Outer Mongolia and Manchuria are parts of China, and the people of these regions themselves feel that they are indissolubly linked with the national government, which recognizes no alienation of territory, and does not intend to, whatever happens.

No Halt in Materials.

"So far there is no indication that the U. S. S. R. will withdraw its advisers from China, or will cease supplying us with war materials."

The italics are mine.

Soviet Russia has given China more aid than any other country has furnished. She has provided planes, pilots, trucks, some artillery, gasoline, military instructors and staff officers who act as military advisers. She has loaned Chiang Kai-shek's government something over the equivalent of 200 million United States dollars.

Most of this huge loan was secured on a barter basis and has been repaid in tea, wolfram (tungsten ore) and other products. The Russians drove a hard bargain when the barter terms were made and at present the Chinese have a difficult time buying the tea at the prices agreed upon with Russia. But they are still making deliveries.

U. S. Asks Reserved Judgment on Sinking

Washington Deeply Concerned as Officials Seek To Determine Whether Nazi U-Boat Sank American Ship.

By The Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, June 10.—A White House request that the public reserve judgment on the sinking of the American ship Robin Moor was issued today while officials, gravely concerned, tried to determine whether a Nazi U-boat sent the vessel to the bottom.
Captain Waldemar Lucio Pereira, of the Brazilian steamship Osorio, which picked up 11 survivors meanwhile said flatly that the Robin Moor was "torpedoed by a German submarine." He made this statement in a radio-gram to the Associated Press, after interviewing the castaways.
At the same time, the State Department had received from Jefferson Caffrey, the American ambassador to Brazil, an assertion that the ship "was sunk," but no further details. This was the only "official" information in the possession of the government.
Through commercial radio channels, however, the Navy received a message saying the Robin Moor was "torpedoed by a German submarine."

The Robin Moor, a craft of 5,000 tons, sailed from New York on May 6 for Cape Town, South Africa, with a general cargo. The Maritime Commission said its information was that this included no munitions. She carried a crew and passenger list of more than 40.
On May 21, the ship sank at longitude 6.15 north, latitude 25.30 west, a position some 700 miles south of the Cape Verde Islands, and a similar distance from Darar, French West Africa. The crew and passengers took to the sea in four lifeboats.
On Sunday the Osorio, plying from Norfolk, Va., to Rio de Janeiro, came upon one of the boats, a few hundred miles north of the easternmost protrusion of South America, fully 800 miles from the position of the sinking. Captain Lucio sent the Associated Press the following message at midnight last night.
"On June 8, at 9 o'clock in the

France Told Only Course Is With Nazis

Must Cleave to Germany or Perish, Darlan Says.

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.
VICHY, Unoccupied France, June 10.—Vice-Premier Admiral Jean Darlan tonight warned the nation that France must cleave to Germany or perish.
By emphatic repetition, Darlan indicated he believed eventual German victory was assured and that France must wholeheartedly play the role of "loyal" collaborator in order to merit a favorable peace settlement and a secure place in a Nazi-dominated new Europe.
The vice-premier, in a speech broadcast to the nation, made no mention of the British invasion of French-mandated Levant States—although in a preceding address he scathingly attacked France's former allies.

Asks for Support.

Darlan appealed for unreserved support in his collaboration policy and declared the government had three essential tasks:

"One, to ease the present situation of the French people;
"Two, to prepare for peace insofar as the vanquished can;
"Three, to prepare for France's future in a new Europe."

Of the first, he emphasized that France's immediate aim was to modify the armistice in order to secure increased supplies of food and the return of war prisoners now in German hands.

The keynote of Darlan's address was "preparation for peace," and he repeatedly emphasized the necessity of creating "a favorable climate for the establishment of an honorable peace."

Many Problems.

Nowhere did he indicate there was a possibility of an immediate peace agreement with Germany, and he made it clear that the essential purpose of the present policy of collaboration, from the French point of view, was to gain the best possible bargaining position when Germany decided the time had come to convert the armistice into a final peace treaty.

Darlan acknowledged that "the signature of a definite peace remains difficult so long as the great problems posed by the present conflict have not been solved."

Of France's position in a Nazi new Europe, Darlan asserted that, unless the nation recognized the necessity of co-operation, he feared "a disastrous peace for France."

Appeals for Unity.

"For France not to carry out the armistice loyally and give the victor reason to denounce it would be equivalent to suicide for herself and her empire," he warned.
"If we don't obtain an honorable peace, if France, with numbers of departments amputated, with important territories across the sea lost, enters the new Europe knocked down and bruised, she will not rise again, and we and our children will live in misery and the hate which war begets."

In appealing for national unity and support for the policy of collaboration, Darlan pointed out that "the armistice, being an act signed by Germany and us—if we wish to modify it, it is necessary to negotiate with Germany."
"The marshal (Chief of State Petain) charged me with that negotiation."
"He has approved developments."

High of 94 Forecast

With No Rain Expected
Higher temperatures this morning, followed by a cloudy afternoon, is today's Weather Bureau forecast. No rain is expected until Friday and Saturday.
Temperatures in Atlanta yesterday ranged from 70 to 92 degrees. High reading at the Municipal Airport yesterday was 97. Today the mercury will soar to 94 before late afternoon.

SIDETRACK—Speaking intently, Undersecretary of War Robert P. Patterson yesterday asked the House Military Committee to sidetrack its so-called property seizure bill. He wants the right of way for legislation giving President Roosevelt authority to deal with defense strikes. (Story on Page 6).

Gallup Poll Reveals:

Defense Strikes Ban Favored

By DR. GEORGE GALLUP.
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.
Copyright, 1941.
PRINCETON, N. J., June 10.—As Washington officials grapple with new defense strikes—just a fortnight after President Roosevelt's declaration of a national emergency—a nation-wide survey of American voters show those with opinions 4 to 1 in favor of the extreme step of forbidding defense strikes altogether.

To most United States labor leaders and to many liberals, the outlawing of strikes of any kind would appear as a catastrophe. Last week the liberal Council for Democracy took full-page advertising space in American newspapers to ask that the strike problem be solved—but that it be solved without resort to sweeping anti-strike legislation.

How many Americans believe that even the latter measure might be preferable to further work stoppages, however, is indicated in the following test:
Cross-Section View.
"Should the government forbid strikes in industries manufacturing materials for our national defense program," the Institute asked a nation-wide cross-section, "or should the workers in those industries continue to have the right to go on strike?"

The actual votes:

	Forbid Strikes	Don't Forbid
1940 Survey	72%	20% 8%
Today's Survey	76	19 5

For many months the public has favored a national mediation system, which they have hoped would iron out difficulties without loss of working time. Eighty-five per cent of the voters went on record for such a system last March, just before President Roosevelt named the present 11-man board. But the current study indicates how far a majority might be willing to go, if milder courses do not bring results.

Two Ideas Seen.

Voter comments show two ideas uppermost in the minds of those who favor a strike ban in defense industries: (1) the belief that American defense has been too slow, that every moment counts and that "production is vital" to our national safety and (2) the feeling that if the government can draft men to serve in the Army for $21 a month, it should be able to demand "some sacrifices" of their brothers in the defense factories.

Strikes at a Glance

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

INGLEWOOD, Cal.—Striking CIO workers began returning to the North American Aviation plant after voting to resume work provided no anti-union discrimination was made and abandoned a demand for withdrawal of troops.

WASHINGTON—An agreement was announced for settlement of a CIO strike at five Cleveland plants of the Aluminum Company of America. A basis also was reached for settlement of a Pittsburgh trucking strike.

DETROIT—A strike by the CIO's United Auto Workers halted defense production of airplane parts in six plants here. Four thousand men walked out.

SAN FRANCISCO—Harvey W. Brown, president of the AFL Machinists Union, today will ask his executive council to authorize him to order back to work some 1,500 to 1,700 machinists on strike against 11 shipyards.

BALTIMORE—Tugboat masters, mates and engineers continued on strike while their counsel prepared a proposal to end the walkout that followed a dispute over wage demands.

BIRMINGHAM—Temporary settlement of a jurisdictional dispute between union employees of the Birmingham Water Works Company coal mine at the pump house was announced by Mayor W. Cooper Green.

1,000 Report for Work on Night Shift After Meeting.

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.
CIO strikers at the Army-controlled North American Aviation factory filtered back to work last night and an agreement was reached for settlement of a strike at five aluminum plants.

About 1,000 night shift workers entered the Inglewood plant after a mass meeting voted the back-to-work movement based on three conditions:

One of these—that the men be allowed to march back in a body—was rejected by Lieutenant Colonel Charles E. Branshaw, whom President Roosevelt placed in charge in ordering the Army to take over the struck factory.

Men Examined.

Each man was subjected to close examination, hence the return to work was slow.

"The Army is not bargaining with the workers," Colonel Branshaw said. "They can come back individually. They have been invited to do so and requested to do so as patriotic citizens."

He reported that 6,666 of the plant's more than 11,500 employees had returned to work on various shifts since 3,500 bayonet-wielding soldiers dispersed picket lines Monday.

Three Demands.

The back-to-work agreement of the holdout strikers was reached after several hours' discussion of a resolution which finally was boiled down to three essential demands: That they be permitted to return in a group, that there would be no discrimination because of union activities and that they be permitted to resume negotiations on their demand for 75 cents an hour minimum wage and 10 cents an hour blanket wage increases.

Colonel Branshaw said there would be no discrimination. Continuation of negotiations and mediation already had been pledged by President Roosevelt.

The Defense Mediation Board in Washington announced an agreement to give workers at the Cleveland plants of the Aluminum Company of America a general wage increase of 1 cent an hour, with a bonus for night work, and to raise the minimum wage from 72 to 73 cents an hour. The CIO Diecasters' Union, which called the strike Monday, sought a 75-cent minimum and other concessions.

Meetings Called.

A board member expressed hope that production could be resumed today but two union organizers told a workers' meeting in Cleveland last night that they had not been advised of the settlement. A general union meeting was called at 2:30 p. m. but no mention was made of voting on ratification of the settlement.

While this settlement was being announced, the Federal Conciliation Service said that a proposal had been made to Pittsburgh truck operators and representatives of the striking AFL Teamster's Union for settlement of their wage dispute. The negotia-

Senate Votes To Exempt Those Who Become 28 Before July 1

WASHINGTON, June 10.—(P)—President Roosevelt would be authorized to defer compulsory military service for men 28 years of age or older under legislation which won tentative senate approval today.

Final action on the measure awaited disposition of amendments to permit the government to take over strike-bound defense plants.

A committee recommendation for the deferment authority was accepted on a voice vote and with little debate. It would apply to men who have reached the age of 28 by July 1, 1941, or on the same date in any subsequent year and who have not been inducted into the service by that time.

The amendment would not alter present provisions of the law which require all men from 21 to 36 to be registered and classified. Those deferred because of age could be called for service later.

Senator Hill, Democrat, Alabama, in charge of the bill, told the senate that four-fifths of the draftees were being obtained from the 21-28 age group because these were better able to serve from a physical and economic standpoint.

Approximately 7,000,000 men registered under the selective service would be affected if the President were granted such authority and chose to exercise it.

Georgia 'Fined' $504,074 for Road Diversion

U. S. Assesses Penalty; Larger Figure Seen for This Year.

By GLADSTONE WILLIAMS, Constitution Staff Correspondent. WASHINGTON, June 10.—Officials of the Public Roads Administration revealed today that a penalty of $504,074 has been imposed on the state of Georgia for diversion of state highway funds during the past year.

The penalty, provided for under the act of June 18, 1934, represents approximately 16 per cent of federal aid highway funds allotted to Georgia as the state's share of such appropriations voted by congress for 1940. Georgia's allotment of the 1940 federal aid highway, grade crossing elimination and secondary feeder road funds was $3,360,507.

Leniency Claimed. In revealing the amount of the penalty, officials said they had dealt leniently with the state as the law permits a maximum penalty under the circumstances of 33 1-3 per cent of the total allotment. Thus the $504,074 penalty imposed is only about half of what might have been levied if the agency had desired.

It develops that notice of the penalty was sent Georgia State Highway Department officials on December 28, 1940, although the amount of the levy was not disclosed publicly until today.

Asked whether another penalty would be imposed against the state this year for further diversion of highway funds, officials asked to be excused from commenting until the books for the present fiscal year are closed June 30, but it was strongly indicated that this would be the case if the state is shown to have made further unauthorized diversion of the highway funds.

Severe Penalty Looms. If another penalty is imposed on the state it undoubtedly will be greater than the 16 per cent ordered for last year, officials stated, and may be for the maximum 33 1-3 per cent. The policy, it was explained, is to make the penalties progressively more severe with each repetition of offense.

Officials pointed out that under the law it is practically mandatory to impose such penalties when states divert for other uses funds collected for expenditure on highway systems.

The 1940 Georgia allotment of federal aid highway funds included $2,507,151 for regular federal highway improvements, $477,283 for grade crossing elimination work, and $376,073 for secondary feeder roads.

P. T. A. Asks 'Parent' School For Delinquent

Grand Jury Proposes Use of Buildings as Play Centers.

Creation of a "parental" school for anti-social, delinquent and incorrigible boys and girls of the Atlanta school system was asked of the Atlanta board of education yesterday by Mrs. I. Kuniansky, chairman of a special delinquent committee of the Atlanta Parent-Teacher Council.

Basing her recommendation on a study made by her committee, Mrs. Kuniansky reported she had interviewed principals and teachers of many schools. While she declined to identify those with whom she has conferred, she said she is convinced that many such students should be removed from their homes and placed in the institution.

In connection with Mrs. Kuniansky's report, it was learned yesterday that a special committee from the Fulton county grand jury is probing juvenile delinquency and that a proposal that schools be used during summer months as supervised play centers and for education of both parents and children is being studied.

A report from the grand jury probably will be made when its presentations are filed.

U. S. Cautions Lisbon To Hold Islands Free

Warns Against Letting Them Be Used by Nazi Forces.

By J. C. STARK.

WASHINGTON, June 10.—(P)—The United States cautioned Portugal today against allowing any use of its strategic islands in the Atlantic by Nazi forces which "now threaten the peace and safety" of the Western Hemisphere.

Secretary of State Hull assured the Portuguese government in a formal note that the United States has "no aggressive intentions" against the Cape Verde islands or the Azores, or the territory of any other country.

But he emphasized that the American government views "with increasing anxiety the constantly expanding acts of aggression on the part of a certain belligerent power which now threaten the peace and safety of the countries of this hemisphere."

Moreover, he declared that "our policy today is based upon the inalienable right of self-defense."

Reply to Criticism. The note, sent to the Portuguese minister, Dr. Joao Antonio de Bianchi, was in reply to critical "observations" on President Roosevelt's references to Portugal's islands in his May 27 fire-side address.

The Portuguese note was not made public.

President Roosevelt had declared in his speech that Germany has "the armed power at any moment to occupy Spain and Portugal"; that Nazi occupation or control of the Cape Verde islands and the Azores would "directly endanger the freedom of the Atlantic and our own physical safety," and that the islands would "provide a springboard for actual attack against the integrity and independence of Brazil and her neighboring republics."

Pepper Act Explained. Portugal took exception to these remarks, as it previously had in connection with suggestions by Senator Pepper, Democrat, Florida, that the United States occupy the Portuguese islands.

In the case of Pepper, the United States told Portugal that it had no aggressive designs on the islands and explained that the senator was not speaking for the government.

The new Portuguese note was delivered on May 30, three days after the President made his fire-side speech.

Before the State Department made public Secretary Hull's reply, President Roosevelt was asked at his press conference this afternoon about reports that Portugal had protested. He replied that he thought there had not been any protest and that there was nothing in his speech for Portugal to protest.

Declarations Noted. It was indicated that the note had not yet been brought to the President's attention.

Secretary Hull's reply noted Portugal's "declarations reaffirming its position of neutrality and its determination to defend its neutrality and sovereign rights against any attacks."

"For its part," Hull said, "the government of the United States can state categorically that it harbors no aggressive intentions against the sovereignty or territorial integrity of any other country."

Luftwaffe Attacks Haifa Pipe Line

BERLIN, June 10.—(P)—German bombers raided Haifa, the oil pipe line port of Palestine, last night, DNB, official German news agency, said tonight.

It said bombs hit a pier as well as one of the great tanks in which oil from the Mosul fields of Iraq is stored.

(A German wireless report heard in New York called this the first German attack against Palestine and the opening of war on the oil supply of Britain's Mediterranean fleet.)

This was the first raid by the Nazi Luftwaffe against Haifa, but it has been raided before by Italian bombers.

"A direct attack on the greatest and most important fuel supply center of the British Mediterranean fleet now had opened," DNB said. "Action of the German Luftwaffe has spread to the British Palestine coast."

Prompt action is necessary in replying to the attractive offers in the Want Ad section of The Constitution.

Scouts To Aid In Drive for Aluminum

House-to-House Appeal Will Be Initiated Next Week.

National defense is anybody's battle—everybody's... when it comes to gathering aluminum.

The Boy Scouts are taking over next week to wage a fight to confiscate every scrap of aluminum in Atlanta. (The traitor pieces are those old pans, pots and miscellaneous pieces that have been tucked away in your attic, garage, pantry or cellar for years and years.)

Last week the smaller children had their stab at it.

This week the Boy Scouts are preparing for their campaign, which will be a house-to-house maneuver beginning Monday and running through Friday.

Randall Acts. Charlie Randall, 14-year-old second-class scout of troop 13, read the stories in last week's Constitution. He has an older brother who will be subject to the draft if the age limit is lowered. He has three younger brothers who went to the Fox matinee party to gather aluminum last Saturday. His father was a sergeant in the World War. So Charlie had to do something for national defense. He turned several things over in his mind.

Then he thought of getting his troop to gather aluminum—no, he decided, it would be better if every Scout in Atlanta helped. And there he had the idea. He took it to the Atlanta Council, who Monday, through Executive Weaver Marr and Council President J. S. Roberts, endorsed the drive and set June 16-20 for the date.

Help Urged. The Scouts are anxious that every housewife in Atlanta help them by looking around sometime this week in advance of their call for scrap aluminum. Then when Mrs. Atlanta looks out her window and sees boys on her street she'll know they aren't selling doughnuts or cookies or circus tickets. She'll know to dash back to the kitchen and bring out those old scraps.

The aluminum these boys gather will be taken to the nearest neighborhood fire station, where it will be collected and sold. Then the proceeds (and it brings 9 to 13 cents a pound) will go toward furthering Red Cross work.

10th of Voters Effect Changes In Constitution

Most Votes Cast on Four-Year Term, Figures Show.

By LUKE GREENE

Less than 10 per cent of the qualified voters of Georgia changed the state constitution so as to provide a four-year term instead of a two-year term for Governor and other constitutional officers, the official tabulation of Secretary of State John B. Wilson showed yesterday.

More votes were cast on the four-year term than on any of the other 70 amendments. The total vote on this amendment was only 80,320 or approximately 15 per cent of the voters. Of this number 50,130 voted for the four-year term and 30,190 against it. The secretary of state estimated there were approximately 525,000 persons qualified to vote.

Compare this vote with some of the primaries. In 1932 when he ran for Governor the first time, Governor Talmadge received 116,381 votes. In 1934 his popular vote grew to 170,409 and in 1940 it was swelled to 183,133.

No Personalities. This shows the reaction of the voters to issues as compared with personalities. In the June 3 election no personalities were involved. Other than the fact that Governor Talmadge was actively supporting the four-year term.

A survey of the official tabulation also showed that many voters cast their ballots for the four-year term but failed to provide an election every four years. The vote on Amendment No. 2, which provided for quadrennial elections, was only 48,221 and the total against it was 28,049.

The state superintendent of schools, who also was given a four-year term, got a greater majority than the Governor and four constitutional officers.

Ignored by Indifferent. Despite the fact this amendment was No. 55 on the list, it polled 43,609 votes for, but only 14,818 against. This was attributed to the fact that those who wanted to vote for the amendment hunted it out, while those who were just voting, generally, did not bother to find it on the list.

The closest vote in the 70 amendments was the 66th, a question of the legislature. It was defeated by a mere 281 votes. The official tabulation showed 28,238 votes for it and 28,519 against.

The official vote on Amendment No. 20, which increased the jurisdiction of justices of the peace from cases involving $100 to $200, was 42,438 for and 11,698 against. This amendment also was endorsed by the Governor.

300 Register For Georgia Synod Meeting

8-Day Young People's Conference Opens at Agnes Scott.

Approximately 300 Presbyterian students from Georgia High schools and colleges registered yesterday for the eight-day annual Young People's Conference of the Synod of Georgia, opening last night on the Agnes Scott campus.

Dr. Vernon S. Broyles, pastor of the North Avenue Presbyterian church, addressed the group in an inspirational service last night, following the organization meeting. He will speak each night at 8:15 o'clock.

A series of courses will be taught by Presbyterian leaders, including Dr. B. K. Tenney, the Rev. Harold Smith and the Rev. H. E. Russell, of Atlanta, and Dr. S. A. Cartledge, of Decatur.

Frank Alexander, of Macon, is president of the conference. New officers will be elected tomorrow, it was announced.

An officers' training school, attended by 60 student leaders, preceded the regular conference, closing yesterday morning.

Mitchell Notified As Ship Sponsor

Margaret Mitchell Marsh yesterday received a letter from Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox, officially designating her sponsor for the cruiser Atlanta, to be launched August 9.

Regent Group To Formulate WGST Lease

Contract Meeting Rules of FCC To Be Drawn at Capitol.

The WGST radio committee of the state board of regents will meet at 2 o'clock this afternoon in the state capitol to formulate a contract with Southern Broadcasting Stations, Inc., that will meet requirements of the Federal Communications Commission.

Since the regents refused to sell the state-owned station several weeks ago, the Federal Communications Commission has asked that the board assume more control in its operation. Representatives of the board already have conferred with federal officials in Washington on the matter.

On the radio committee are R. D. Harvey, of Rome, chairman; W. S. Morris, of Augusta; L. W. Robert Jr., of Atlanta; Regents' Chairman Sandy Beaver, of Gainesville; Chancellor S. V. Sanford, and President M. L. Brittain, of Georgia Tech.

At the same time the regents announced a meeting of the building committee for 10 o'clock this morning in Athens to award a contract for construction of the Gilbert Memorial infirmary at the University of Georgia. Last October Judge Price Gilbert gave approximately $80,000 for construction of the building. It is to be dedicated to the memory of his father.

The Fenix had been trading recently between New York, New Orleans, Philadelphia and Finland. She was the fortieth Finnish merchant ship sunk since the start of the war.

SWIM LESSONS.—There's no more excuse for not being able to swim than there is for not being able to read and write, the Red Cross believes. So that all Atlanta youngsters can learn, Thomas Morris, director of water safety for the Red Cross, with a crew of instructors, is giving free lessons. Above are Pauline Hughes and Instructor Morris watching, while Betty Tarrant, Caroline Ann Tarrant, and Margie Smith pull Roy Luckey, Douglas Hemrock and James Kight through the water.

Swim Lessons Being Taught By Red Cross

Thomas Morris Directs Campaign at City, County Pools.

With approximately 100,000 school children in Atlanta and Fulton county eager to go on picnics at beaches, swimming pools and even the old swimming hole, the Atlanta chapter of the Red Cross yesterday began seeking to reduce the number of casualties during the summer months by instructing all Atlantans in water safety by holding classes of instruction in swimming and life-saving at all city and county pools.

Thomas Morris, director of first aid and water safety, said: "There is no more excuse for not being able to swim than for being unable to read or write. Education in those elements has penetrated into the most remote part of the back woods. Swimming is no great mystery. It is as simple and as easy as falling off a log. The instruction is given free by the Red Cross and every youngster and adult should avail himself of the opportunity offered by the Red Cross to learn to swim. They will have more fun, acquire confidence in themselves and may be able to save a companion, where without swimming lessons they might not be able to do these things."

Failure Choice Over Inaction, Churchill Says

Says He Intends To Strike Rather Than Stand Still.

By The Associated Press.
LONDON, June 10.—Winston Churchill, fighting the great parliamentary battle of his life before his critics in commons, made it plain today that as long as he was Britain's war leader, he was going to strike rather than stand still, to act rather than risk inaction and surrender.

This, he said without apology, was his choice between the "terrible alternatives" offered him on Crete and this would be his choice to the end.

He rejected, with a sharp "no," suggestions for the formation of an imperial war cabinet.

He said flatly that he could not and would not explain every British defeat—because such explanations would help the Axis, would be only partial and not informative as to the conduct of the war as a whole and because: "Defeat is bitter. It is no use trying to explain defeat. People do not like defeat, and they do not like explanations. There is only one answer to defeat. The only answer to defeat is victory."

Attacks Hore-Belisha.
He turned sharply upon his chief opponent—Leslie Hore-Belisha, a former war secretary—and said that, while he welcomed such criticism as had been put in the house, there was other criticism "calculated to give one the feeling of a challenge to the security of the administration."

His voice rough and tight with emotion, he retraced his earlier statement that some German paratroopers descending on Crete had "worn New Zealand battle dress, and this was his explanation heard in a profound silence."

"I gave this report to the house, as it reached me from the commander-in-chief of the Middle East, but he now informs me that a mistake arose from the fact that paratrooper troops after landing at one point drove a number of New Zealanders walking wounded with them and before them in their attack and therefore the cry arose that they were in New Zealand uniform."

Costly to Both Sides.

The disaster of Crete, the prime minister said frankly, was "a somber and ferocious battle" which had been costly to Britain—but to Germany, too. For, he said, the Nazis had lost 5,000 troops drowned, 12,000 killed or wounded and 180 fighter planes and bombers and 150 troop transport aircraft against British losses of 15,000 men killed, wounded or taken prisoner.

British production of guns and heavy tanks, he declared, was 50 per cent higher in the first quarter of 1941 than in the last quarter of 1940 and the great struggle for the Atlantic is "being well maintained."

Then, so moved that the clarity of language that had made him famous was much impaired, he concluded:

"I give no guarantee. I make no promise or prediction for the future, but if the next six months—during which we must expect ever harder fighting and many disappointments—should find us in no worse position than in which we stand today and if, after having fought so long alone against Germany and Italy and all the intrigues and treacheries of Vichy, we should be found in six months' time to be the faithful and unflinching guardians of the Nile valley and of the regions which lie about it—then I say that a famous chapter will have been written in the martial history of Britain and the British commonwealth of nations."

'Needs Martial Victory'
Thus ending one of his longest war reviews since he took the prime ministership, he strode from the house as the members filed noisily into the lobbies.

Hore-Belisha set off the great debate. He was fairly told by Churchill in response that he should be the last to criticize, having left production and supply in "lamentable" condition when he himself was war secretary.

Among others joining the attack was Arthur Baxter, a conservative, who characterized the war cabinet as unwieldy.

Said another conservative, Earl Winterton, in expressing hope that Churchill would meet "the very substantial points" raised.

"There has been a tendency to think that because the government has won a debate we have thereby won a battle."

Some observers said that Churchill's government needed a martial victory to continue its hold over Parliament.

The Army IN GEORGIA

"This is beneath the dignity of a first class private!"

A call for volunteer nurses, to be commissioned as second lieutenants in the Army and assigned to base hospitals throughout the nation, was issued yesterday by Fourth Corps Area.

Because enlistments in the nursing corps have not kept pace with the enlargement of the regular Army, there is a growing shortage of hospital attendants. At present there are 1,100 nurses on duty in the corps area, but 2,800 nurses will be required by the end of this month.

To be eligible for assignment, a nurse must be between the ages of 21 and 40 years old, must have been graduated from an accredited school of nursing and registered in at least one state and be in good physical condition.

Applications for assignment should be sent to The Surgeon, Headquarters, Fourth Corps Area, Atlanta.

COUNTY COMES TO AID OF MACON FARMERS.

MACON, Ga., June 10.—(AP)—For the past month three Georgia farmers, W. F. Pate, J. D. Bradley and Walter Herndon, have had privacy and quietude.

When an air corps flying field was under construction, near their property, the Army did nothing worse than engulf the dead-end road leading to their farms.

But over the weekend the Army threw a barbed wire fence across the area through which the road runs, leaving only gates to permit their contact with the outside world. The Army also advised the semi-isolated three that a permanent fence soon would have to be erected—with no holes in it.

Even with the gate-pierced fence, visitors stopped coming to see the three families; delivery trucks were turned back at entrance guardhouses and the mail man announced his services would have to be discontinued, effective at once.

Just as the situation seemed blackest, the county came to the

Il Duce Defies U. S. To Admit War on Axis

Says Intervention Will Not Halt Victory; Assaults Roosevelt.

ROME, June 10.—(AP)—Premier Mussolini told his people today that the United States is at war with the Axis in fact if not legally, but that "American intervention" will not prevent a Nazi-Fascist victory.

In effect, Il Duce defied the United States to declare war formally. He assailed President Roosevelt—calling him "Delano Roosevelt"—as an example of "a dictator in the pure classic meaning of the term."

Further, Mussolini said that American intervention in the war would result in bringing to the United States "an authoritarian, totalitarian regime."

The occasion was observance of the first anniversary of Italy's declaration of war.

In War De Facto.
United States Ambassador William Phillips was conspicuously absent from the diplomatic gallery of the chamber.

A native of Italy, the American intervention does not bother us excessively," Il Duce said. "An explicit declaration of war would not modify the actual situation, which is one of de facto war if not de jure."

"The American intervention, even completely employed, would be too late, and if not late would not change the terms of the problem."

"American intervention will not give Britain victory, but will prolong the war. It will not limit the space of the war, but will extend it beyond the oceans."

"It will transform the United States regime into an authoritarian, totalitarian regime compared with which the forerunner European regimes—Fascist and Nazi—will find themselves far surpassed and perfected."

Assails Roosevelt.

Then Mussolini turned to President Roosevelt personally. "When it is desired to recall a dictator in the pure classic meaning of the term, Sulla is cited," Il Duce told his countrymen. "All right, Sulla appears a modest amateur in comparison with Delano Roosevelt."

(Lucius Cornelius Sulla, a Roman dictator who lived from 138 B. C. was noted for a policy of "blood and iron" and was referred to by his enemies as "half-lion, half-fox.")

Touches Japan's Attitude.
Il Duce spoke bluntly of Italy's situation at home, mentioning "recent critical points in our food situation" and "pessimists and doubters." These latter were not to be found among the masses, he said.

Reviewing the situation abroad, Mussolini said that "Japan's attitude in perfect line with the tripartite pact" and that "the Japanese are a proud and loyal people who could not remain indifferent in the face of American aggression against the Axis."

Turkey aided Greece in the war with Italy, he said. But, he added, Turkey's president now is "aware of the sad fate of those who line up with England." Italy continues to follow a policy of "comprehension" toward Turkey, the premier said.

He stressed Italian-German unity, terming ridiculous rumors of strain. "Two peoples, one war," he said.

Nurses Training School Planned
As a step toward increasing the nation's supply of registered nurses, Dr. Frank K. Boland, chairman of the Atlanta Chapter, American Red Cross, announced yesterday that a training school for nurses will be held in collaboration with Bryn Mawr College and the Women's Medical College of Pennsylvania. The college graduates will be trained as nurses in a shorter time than the usual 36 months.

The school will be at Bryn Mawr from June 23 to September 13. Tuition of $100 per student will be charged and applications for enrollment should be addressed to the Red Cross Nurses' Training Camp, Bryn Mawr College, Penn.

Cotton Alone Holds Its Own Against Drouth

Pastures Parched, Truck Crops Reported Ruined Beyond Recovery.

Blighting drouth still held Georgia in its grip yesterday with cotton alone holding its own in all sections against the rainless weather.

Throughout the state pastures are parched and truck crops generally are ruined beyond repair, though many field crops may still be saved if rain falls soon enough, reports gathered by The Constitution yesterday from experiment stations throughout the state indicated.

From Griffin, Director H. P. Stuckey reported: "Peanuts planted early are in fair condition, but the stand of the later crop is poor. Early peaches are very small but rains may yet save late varieties. Cotton is in fair condition, but corn is suffering, though rains can still save the late crop. Small grains are light and chaffy due to dry weather, and garden and truck crops are almost ruined. Pastures are dried up and the pimiento stand is poor, with much acreage not planted."

From Athens, Assistant Extension Director L. I. Skinner reported damage general to gardens, truck crops and pastures, with corn standing the weather fairly well. Other feed crops are suffering, though showers in the past few days have helped some localities.

School Bus Plunges Off Augusta Highway

More Italians Captured
LONDON, June 10.—(AP)—Authoritative British sources said today 3,900 prisoners were taken in the advance of two British columns on an Italian stronghold in the Jimma section of Ethiopia, southwest of Addis Ababa.

A column from the south pushed on 12 miles beyond the Omo river and one from the north reached Socorro, 15 miles southwest of Abalti, these sources said.

Macon Mohammedan Drafted Defies Shaving Mug and Tie

FORT DIX, N. J., June 10.—(AP)—Draftee Eddie Stephens Bey, a bearded professed Mohammedan who was born in Macon, Ga., is in the Fort Dix guard house pondering Army regulations that require personnel to shave, cut their hair and wear proper uniform.

Pending findings by a board of investigation appointed by Colonel Cassius M. Dowell, post commandant, Private Bey has been permitted to carry out fatigue duties in the conventional prisoner's blue denim topped with a black tasseled, red fez.

Private Bey said a necktie to him signifies a hangman's noose.

Schools May Open Half Hour Later
The Atlanta board of education may order the 80,000-odd students of the public school system to their classrooms at 9 o'clock in the morning for the new school year to relieve traffic congestion and to take some of the sting from the necessity of arriving at schools at 8:30 o'clock.

School administration officials yesterday were ordered to study a proposal by Mayor LeCraw that the ancient custom of opening local schools at 8:30 o'clock be changed to 9 o'clock. The mayor says surveys show that the peak in morning traffic is reached at 8:20 o'clock and that, if the time were changed, Georgia Power Company officials believe they could provide a seat for each schoolchild en route to school.

Ph.D. Thesis Title Is 75 Letters Long
CAMBRIDGE, Mass., June 10.—(UP)—Miss Jeanne Virginia Kintop, of Aurora, Ill., won a doctor of philosophy degree in chemistry at Massachusetts Institute of Technology today and spectators learned about her "heavy" thesis on light.

The thesis which won her degree was entitled: "Synthesis of Aminobenzoylureas and of Dihydroxyquinolines Isomeric With Luminol."

Her professor said that meant she was writing about "Studies of compounds related to those which gave off cold light."

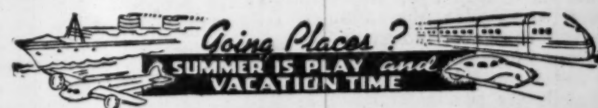

Big Peach Crop Is Forecast by Government

Georgia To Produce 5,159,000 Bushels, a Gain Over 1940.

WASHINGTON, June 10.—(AP) The 1941 peach crop apparently will be the largest since 1931. The Agriculture Department reported today that the condition of the crop on June 1 indicated production of 5,159,000 bushels. In 1940 it was 5,430,000.

A heavy national production was forecast despite continued dry weather during May in southern states, where five per cent was trimmed off the May 1 production estimate. The crop of 10 southern states was placed at 20,840,000 bushels, 6,984,000 above last year. It was said prospects declined during May in all these states except North Carolina and Arkansas.

Among 1941 predictions and 1940 production figures were: Georgia 5,159,000 bushels for 1941 against 4,216,000 for 1940; Arkansas, 3,120,000 and 2,040,000; South Carolina, 3,081,000 and 2,158,000; North Carolina, 2,430,000 and 1,344,000; Tennessee, 2,240,000 and 700,000.

3 Income Tax Claims Filed Against Spreckels
SAN FRANCISCO, June 10.—(AP)—Three income tax deficiency judgments totaling more than $725,000 were filed in federal court today against Rudolph Spreckels, whose father pioneered sugar refining on the west coast. The industrialist, now 69, acquired a fortune so large at the age of 26 that he was able to retire.

Russell Lauds President's Strike Action

Five-Point Legion Object. Outlined at Valdosta Convention.

VALDOSTA, Ga., June 10.—(AP)—Since World War No. 1 the American Legion has persistently and faithfully warned this country of the "danger signal" of apathy toward defense preparedness. United States Senator Richard B. Russell told the Georgia Legion convention here today.

"You men in state and national convention, said the senator, himself a Legionnaire, in an impromptu address, 'have long called attention to our lack of defense and urged that something be done about it.'"

The senator recalled that it was not long ago that a senate subcommittee's request for $400,000 additional funds to buy anti-aircraft guns was "derided" to death.

Commends F. D. R. He strongly commended the drastic action of President Roosevelt in sending federal troops into the strike-bound plant of the North American Aviation Company at Inglewood, Cal.

"My only regret is that it did not come six months ago," he said. "However, the President was faced with many things of which all of us had no knowledge."

The American Navy, said Senator Russell, far surpasses Hitler's panzer divisions in efficiency and deadliness. He added that he had accompanied naval units on "spine-chilling" maneuvers.

Expressing a fervent hope that no war would come to this country, he said: "However, if the future does bring us war we, as Americans, must win it."

Homer Challaux, Legion director of Americanism who resides at Inglewood, where the troops are on the strike scene, declared that if the present department hearing for Harry Bridges fails to eject the west coast labor leader, the Legion would intensify its drive for a federal law to put out "this radical alien."

The convention's resolutions committee yesterday approved a resolution recommending removal of Labor Secretary Perkins and deportation of Bridges and approving the President's action in the Inglewood strike.

Challaux today outlined a five-point objective program by which the Legion is meeting the challenge of the national emergency and the present international situation.

Points Outlined. "First," he said, "we are dramatizing the privileges of being an American, not the sorrow and troubles, in an educational program. The Legion is increasing all ways its fight against textbooks in our schools that teach subversive doctrines."

"Second, we want to close our doors to all immigration until everyone of the 5,000,000 Americans now idle has a job."

"Third, we are working for a legal means to bar the Communist and German bund organizations anywhere in this nation."

"Fourth, we are driving to eliminate the Communist elements causing the sabotage."

"Fifth, there must be no strikes in defense industries."

A colorful parade yesterday afternoon formally opened the day session of the convention, which will close tomorrow.

Atlanta Doctor Charged With Cursing on Phone. Dr. Harry Vaughn, Atlanta physician, yesterday was fined five counts of using opprobrious language to telephone operators because he was dissatisfied with the service.

The Fulton county grand jury charged him with cursing over the telephone. Ralph Platt, district manager of the telephone company, said he had ordered Dr. Vaughn's telephone discontinued.

Strikers Vote To Return at Plane Factory

tors returned to Pittsburgh to consider the proposal.

Dr. John R. Steelman, Conciliation Service chief, declined to disclose the details, but said he expected an answer from the employers and the union by tonight.

Trucking Dispute. Involved in the dispute are 179 truck companies and 2,800 drivers, dockmen, checkers and helpers. Officials said that the union and the companies were able to agree on most of the terms of a new contract except wages.

The North American Aviation workers, in voting to go back to their benches, abandoned an earlier demand that the troops be withdrawn from the Inglewood (Cal.) plant.

Less than 30 hours after the army had commandeered the plant, under orders from President Roosevelt, the strikers agreed to march in a body to ask their jobs back pending immediate negotiation of their original demands for higher wages and a union shop. They stipulated only that their union cards not be forfeited and that they not be discriminated against.

Regular Pay Scale. In Washington, President Roosevelt told his press conference that the owners of North American would get their property back as soon as possible. This, he said, also would hold true in any other similar cases which might develop. He added that he hoped no other such cases would even-tuate.

The President said that North American workers would receive the regular scale of pay this week, with the understanding that if wages are boosted the increase will be retroactive to May 1.

Another strike of aluminum workers was called in Detroit during the day against six plants of the Bohn Aluminum and Brass Corporation. Some 4,000 members of the CIO-United Auto Workers Union were involved, and here again the dispute had been certified to the Washington Mediation Board.

Reporters asked Mr. Roosevelt if the Army might be used in the aluminum strikes and he replied that these cases were in the hands of the Mediation Board which had submitted no report.

A War Department official, who declined the use of his name, said in Washington that if the Cleveland and Detroit strikes continued the production of military airplanes would come to a "dead halt." He added that the plants involved were the principal sources of aluminum castings, forgings and extrusions, all essential to plane construction.

Another threat to military aircraft production arose in San Diego, Cal., when AFL machinists began balloting on whether to call a strike at the Consolidated Aircraft Corporation, which has $700,000,000 of bomber contracts. The union has been negotiating for a contract calling for a union shop, minimum wages of 60 cents an hour instead of the present 50 cents, and automatic increases to 75 cents after six months' service.

The decision of North American Company strikers to ask permission to return to work came after Lieutenant Colonel Branshaw had announced that production was almost 75 per cent of normal in the Army-controlled plant.

The Cleveland Aluminum Company workers called their strike after accusing Alcoa of stalling on wage demands and after asserting that the mediation board was getting nowhere in its negotiations. The union is asking a general increase in pay of 4 1/2 cents an hour and a raise in the minimum from 72 to 75 cents an hour.

The Bohn Aluminum strike in Detroit was called after the union had failed in its demands for a general pay increase of 10 cents an hour over undisclosed present scales. The case was certified to the mediation board Monday by Secretary of Labor Perkins, but a union leader said that when he received word of the secretary's action the strike already had been called and "it was too late to get word to the men."

land. Production figures are military secrets.

There was other defense news. Curtiss-Wright Corporation reported it had shipped "well over one thousand planes to England" and that more were on the way.

England is getting about half the Curtiss-Wright output and is beginning to get half of the deadly and fascinating Airacobras. Never have I seen anything so well named as this vicious machine. It makes the real cobra look like a milkop.

There was still other news in planes.

New Pursuit Shown. At the private air show given the correspondents today, Curtiss-Wright showed for the first time their 1942 interceptor pursuit plane, a thin, silver streak of plane not yet named and not yet disclosed to the public. It is even thinner than the Airacobra but its gun mounts were not announced.

What makes the Airacobra so deadly is its revolutionary design. In all other fighting planes the pilot sits behind the engine which is in the front of the plane.

In the Airacobra the engine is in the center of the plane and the pilot sits in front of it. This leaves room ahead for the installation of the 37-millimeter cannon. It fires through the propeller shaft, the barrel extending through about four inches. Larry Bell, head of the company which made it, and its designer, R. J. Woods, claim for their ship three patents which no other fighting plane has.

It gives much more visibility to the pilot, it can fire a cannon through its nose, it has a tricycle landing gear which makes it invaluable for landing on fields at night in time of war when landing fields can be dimly lighted if at all. English observers are enthusiastic about it and are eager for it to get into service.

There are ordinary supercharg-ers and now there are the turbo-superchargers in which the exhaust gas heat is used to further boost the power of the engines. There also are developed two stage superchargers.

The fighting is going up and up. There is talk now of fighting at 40,000 feet. The air officials frankly say the pilot is not as strong at the new high speeds, high altitude ships being developed. Fighting at speeds of 400 miles an hour the pilot has to fight loss of consciousness on each of his turns at that blinding speed. Training of the pilots, muscle exercises to keep the blood from draining out of the brain on one of the fast turns, are being developed. The blood, when going along with the body at 400 or more miles an hour, keeps going on in that direction when a turn is made. The result is too often loss of consciousness.

Race Goes On. Yet all designers and all experts agreed today that the new designs are going in for more speed and more altitude. The fighters fight to keep up on top of other fighters and bomb as to be able to dive on them.

And so the race goes on. The Curtiss Company also showed today a light bomber, which they say is the answer to the German Stuka. It carries 2,000 pounds of bombs and is good and fast.

Officials of both Curtiss and Bell said strikes in sub-contracting plants had delayed them, that on occasion some parts were not available.

Tools and machines have been lacking and this factor has caused delay. It is the same story one encounters everywhere in industry engaged in defense.

The story remains the same. We've got the best fighter airplane and we are developing others. But we haven't got enough of them.

Other Fields Same. The story remains the same in other fields. We are starting out as Germany did seven years ago. We've made more progress than even that famed war machine. We are going to do it in about two years which it required the Germans to do. But, meanwhile, there is the undeniable fact that in many phases of defense we are anywhere from a month to a year and a half away.

We also lack in airplanes, choices of engines. But this is being remedied with three leading companies announcing they are designing new engines. They are, of course, at least a year away.

But when this dam does break we are going to turn loose the greatest flood of materials the world has ever seen. Never forget that fact. In the meantime England will get planes and tanks and engines and food.

It remains to be seen if what we can send—and one thousand planes from Curtiss isn't a bad start—is enough to hold her through the rest of the summer and into the fall when our things will begin moving.

Tomorrow we see submarines at New London, Conn.

More Defense Expenditures In South Seen

Louisiana's Governor Cites Result of Joint Action.

BATON ROUGE, La., June 10.—(AP)—Governor Sam Jones today said efforts of himself and other southern governors for location of more defense industries in the south had borne fruit and even additional construction contracts might be expected.

He was elated with the announcement that a $300,000,000 shell loading plant was to be built at Bayou Dorchet, near Minden. "This makes a total of $75,000,000 expenditures in Louisiana and just off the border of Louisiana for defense industries within the past few weeks," Jones said, referring to a $45,000,000 project he said had been announced for Texas, Ark.

The governor attributed location of these plants in the south to the plea for additional defense industries made directly by eight southern governors in a group to President Roosevelt at the White House.

Schools Here Face Rising Coal Prices

Advancing coal prices may cost the Atlanta school department $7,000 more for the 1941-42 term than was spent for fuel during the past year.

Thomas W. Clift, school business manager, said yesterday dealers are asking $1 a ton more for the 7,000 tons needed by the schools.

The board instructed Clift to attempt to obtain better prices, but that if he could not to close the contracts before other advances push the cost figure upward again.

Leaders Confident Measure Will Be Passed Today.

(Picture on Page 1)

WASHINGTON, June 10.—(AP)—A War Department request for speedy congressional action to give the President statutory authority for taking over defense plants hampered by strikes ran into a bottleneck of senate debate today but leaders were confident of passage tomorrow.

Senator Byrd, Democrat, Virginia, touched off the dispute when he asked congress to go on record as condemning all defense strikes.

Senator Murdock, Democrat, Utah, immediately protested that this would be a "pat on the back for the industrialists and a kick in the face for labor" because some of the strikes were caused by employers.

Warning Given. This caused Senator Bailey, Democrat, Nevada, to warn that "if we are on the verge of war and can't stop these national defense strikes, then we ought to turn tail and flee like rats."

"I'd give up the Bill of Rights to save America just as I'd give up my life," Bailey said.

Before these arguments Senator Connally, Democrat, Texas, had won broad support for his proposal to give the President authority to take over any plant when he finds that the "national defense program will be impeded or delayed by an existing or threatened failure of production at any plant as a result of a strike, or threatened strike, or other cause."

Speed Requested. Robert P. Patterson, undersecretary of war, told the House Military Committee that the War Department wanted congress to speed action on legislation of this type, offered in the house by Chairman Vinson, Democrat, Georgia, of the Naval Committee.

Patterson said that the department was willing to sidetrack temporarily its request for the so-called property seizure" bill to speed passage of the Connally-Vinson measures.

Senators Vandenberg, Republican, Michigan, and Murdock, suggested that Communist and others favoring government ownership of industries might foment strikes to force nationalization of industry.

"I don't think a few Communists will be doing this to get a bayonet jabbed into their stomachs like they did in California," Connally replied.

Senator Asks Lindbergh Be Sent To Berlin as Military Attache

WASHINGTON, June 10.—(AP)—Senator Brewster, Republican, Maine, suggested in a radio address tonight that Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh be sent to Berlin as military attache for aviation.

Supporting President Roosevelt's foreign policy but criticizing his "handling of the Lindbergh affair," he said no one could be better qualified "to divine whether Germany is really building 400 planes a day as one returning diplomat reports."

Speaking over Columbia Broadcasting System, Brewster appealed for unity in facing the nation's foreign problems. "Up in Maine," he said, "we have been brought up on the sea and when the ship gets out of sight of land we recognize that the captain is boss. With breakers ahead and a storm raging it is not practicable to hold a town meeting every time we port the helm or reef a sail."

"I did not vote for the captain but along with 100,000,000 other Americans, I am still a member of the all-American team. If I am compelled to a choice between Roosevelt and Hitler, I choose Roosevelt."

A native of Culpeper, Va., a graduate of the Virginia Military Institute and a veteran of the World War, Colonel Fray will point out how community life, recreation, theaters, dances, housing, service clubs and the U. S. O. can aid military morale.

It will be the first meeting by the new officers.

Bush, assistant corresponding secretary; Mrs. William E. England, treasurer; Mrs. Della Beveridge, auditor, and Mrs. F. P. Sweeney, chaplain.

Greatest Danger. Frank Kelly, of the Herald Tribune talked of the integration of the whole vast industry—plants on the west coast turning out materials that plants on the east coast cannot operate a substitute—and saw in this the greatest danger from strikes.

Edwin Stout of the Associated Press, speaking also of the quality of American implements of war, described Diesel engines which would operate a submarine six knots faster than any other submarine in the world.

The group spoke over the Mutual Broadcasting system, through station WATL in Atlanta.

U. S. Making Finest Planes, Writers Say

All-Out Production Not Yet Begun, They Agree.

Five American newspapermen of a party of 12 now touring defense industries speaking from Buffalo last night on a nationwide radio hook-up, told of their impressions as to how this country is progressing in the manufacture of the tools of war.

They were agreed that the things being made in the United States are the finest in the world—the planes, tanks and guns. But they were agreed as well that all-out production has not yet begun and the big question is—"Can we send England what she needs before she collapses?"

McGill Speaks. Ralph McGill, executive editor of The Constitution, saw "within a year, perhaps, the greatest industrial output the world has ever seen—a flood of war materials of every kind."

Ray Daniell, New York Times reporter, saw our first real results coming from the field of aircraft manufacture, though he expressed the fear that we would be too late to help England.

Tom Treanor, of the Los Angeles Times, was impressed most by the perfection of American planes—particularly by the Bell Airacobra, which outspes the sound of its own motors.

Greatest Danger. Frank Kelly, of the Herald Tribune talked of the integration of the whole vast industry—plants on the west coast turning out materials that plants on the east coast cannot operate a substitute—and saw in this the greatest danger from strikes.

Edwin Stout of the Associated Press, speaking also of the quality of American implements of war, described Diesel engines which would operate a submarine six knots faster than any other submarine in the world.

PROPOSED GILBERT MEMORIAL—The building committee of the Board of Regents will meet in Athens today to award the contract for the construction of the Gilbert Memorial Infirmary on the University campus at Athens. The building is being presented to the University by Judge S. Price Gilbert, former member of the Georgia supreme court, and it will be dedicated to the memory of his father, a graduate of the Augusta Medical College, and to Judge Gilbert's son, Francis, who graduated at the University in 1927. The architect's plans call for a modern plant.

Regents To Let Contract for Gilbert Plant

Committee To Open Bids at Athens for Memorial Infirmary.

Special to THE CONSTITUTION.
ATHENS, Ga., June 10.—The building committee of the Board of Regents of the University System of Georgia will meet here tomorrow morning to award the contract for the construction of the Gilbert Memorial Infirmary at the University of Georgia.

The building is made possible by a gift of $80,000 in 1940 by Judge S. Price Gilbert, former justice of the Georgia supreme court, and it is to be dedicated to his father, the late Dr. Jasper Newton Gilbert, a graduate of the Augusta Medical College, and to Judge Gilbert's son, Francis, who graduated at the university in 1927.

The building committee is composed of Regent Members L. W. Robert Jr., chairman; Miller R. Bell, vice chairman; Joe I. Jenkins, T. Jack Lance, Julian Strickland and General Sandy Beaver, chairman of the Board of Regents. Others expected to be present at the awarding include Judge Gilbert, Chancellor S. V. Sanford and President Harmon W. Caldwell. Professor R. H. Driftmier will tabulate the bids and make recommendation to the committee, it is stated.

The building will have a brick exterior with a tile shingled roof. The plant is to be heated from Denmark Hall, a near-by building, the heating plant of which will be enlarged.

The plans call for a modern infirmary, capable of caring for all the needs of sick students. It will contain offices, operating and X-ray rooms; rooms for patients on several floors and nurses' quarters.

The infirmary will be built on Lumpkin street, and will conform to other campus buildings in architecture.

Judge Gilbert was born in Stewart county and graduated at Vanderbilt University and at Yale. He began the practice of law in Atlanta in 1885, moved to Columbus in 1886 and served as solicitor-general of superior court there from 1893 to 1908 and was superior court judge from 1908 until 1916. He served as a justice of the supreme court of Georgia from 1916 until 1937 when he voluntarily retired.

State Promotion Lacks Financing

Georgia's constitution has been amended to provide for advertising and promoting the state's resources, but it developed yesterday that the state has no money for this purpose and probably will not have until some subsequent legislature sees fit to grant an appropriation.

The amendment, which specifically provided for "advertising and promoting the agricultural, historic, recreational and natural resources, facilities and assets of the state" passed by an official vote of 28,610 for and 10,191 against.

State Auditor B. E. Thrasher said there was no fund upon which the state could draw for carrying out the provisions of this amendment, but pointed out that some of the individual state departments might use any surplus for this purpose.

Talmadge Pays Tribute to 'Dads'

On the eve of "Father's Day," Governor Talmadge yesterday paid tribute to Georgia's "Dads." Writing in his political publication, the chief executive enumerated many of the duties of "Dad" and closed with this poetic toast: "Here's to you, old Dad. Those horny hands were put there for the ones you love, and we love you in return."

Fouling Their Own Nest

In no country, at no time in the history of the world, has organized labor, per se, enjoyed the public support and governmental backing which has been granted in the United States during the past decade or more.

National lawmakers have leaned backward their desire to write into the statute books laws which would give labor every advantage. The national administration has, time and again, interpreted and administered those laws in furtherance of labor. Public opinion has backed and approved this tendency to advance the cause of organized labor. By legitimate and proper means the cause of labor is advancing by leaps and bounds.

Whatever adverse criticism has been aroused against organized labor has been aroused, directly, by unwise actions by labor itself.

The split in the ranks of labor which resulted in the rivalry between AFL and CIO was the first mistake. Leaders on both groups developed such an intrafraternal hatred for the others, that much of their ability and effort has been expended in useless warfare between themselves. Organized labor has been the battlefield for a civil warfare that has cost it much.

Then came the "sit-down" strikes, a method of direct sabotage of property that alienated large portions of the general public.

And now, as if seeking the supreme opportunity to hamstring their own cause, labor is acting as a national enemy within our gates and staging strike after strike, three-fourths of them unjustified, in the very industries upon which the survival of this nation depends.

It has been shown, with incontrovertible evidence, that there is a strong element of out-group racketeers and crooks in places of importance in many AFL organizations. It has been demonstrated, just as clinching, that the Communists have gained many places of control in CIO unions.

It is conceded that much of the trouble in the ranks of labor springs from these undesirable elements. It is known that strikes in defense industry have been deliberately fomented by Communists who desire only to delay or halt the American program of defense and war aid.

Many agencies have sought to purge the ranks of organized labor of racketeers, Communists and Nazi agents. For one reason or another, these efforts have so far failed. The man on the street cannot understand why it is not possible for the FBI, or other government agencies, to seize known Nazi agents, and Communists, who are actively attacking this nation from within, and deport them. Or, if this is impossible because of war conditions, at least lock them up where they can do no further harm.

Yet, with all this effort, from outside, to get rid of these dangerous foes to the nation who have filtered into the ranks of organized labor, it is strange, puzzling, why there has been no effort by labor itself to set its own house in order. Instead, racketeers within the AFL have been defended and given fulsome praise by the highest officials of the international headquarters. Instead, CIO leaders have defended the very men who are playing the roles of enemies among us.

Because of these mounting attacks against the national safety and because of labor's own failure to get rid of the enemy termites within its house, organized labor has today lost three-fourths of that public sympathy and approval which, only a few years ago, was its greatest strength.

The latest Gallup poll, made public this week, shows that 76 out of every 100 people in this country favor governmental action absolutely forbidding strikes in defense industries.

Such overwhelming condemnation of organized labor, while the nation faces the most dire emergency in its history, is convincing evidence that labor has utterly lost public support.

If labor does not set its own house in order, if defense strikes do not cease by labor's own action, an aroused nation will demand that the government, through the Army, take over all defense industry—just as it did at the North American Aviation Company plant in California—draft all striking workers into the Army and put them to work, as men subject to the full rigors of Army discipline, where they can best serve the nation—even if at the machines they have previously deserted.

The war over, millions throughout the world will have to start over from scratch, when they get that far ahead.

Torpedoed

Radioed reports of the rescue of eleven survivors of the United States ship Robin Moor state unequivocally that the vessel was torpedoed. Messages to the Navy Department at Washington are even more specific, stating the ship was torpedoed "by a German submarine."

It is significant that the date of the sinking is given as May 21, although the lifeboat carrying eleven survivors was not sighted until June 8. That small boat was adrift on the South Atlantic, therefore, for 18 days.

Adding to the tragedy is the fact that three other lifeboats, reported by survivors to have left the sinking ship, have not been found. These missing boats contained 35 persons, including seven passengers, of whom three were women and one was a child.

If fuller and later developments substantiate the first messages, the seriousness of the situation is immediately apparent. It means, with no room for argument, that the Nazi government is following in the footsteps of old imperial Germany, that it is determined to sink American ships regardless. Evidently the Nazis, like the leaders in the Kaiser's day, believe the United States is negligible as a war factor and that the advantage to be gained by sinking our ships, by drowning our citizens, is greater than the danger of bringing us into the war.

That, as history shows, was the fatal mistake made by the Kaiser. It will, in all probability, be the fatal mistake for Hitler.

Of course, to all intents and purposes, the United States is already in the war. This nation is irrevocably committed to the task of defeating Hitler and removing the Nazi menace from the world.

However, if by such things as the sinking of the Robin Moor, Hitler forces a declaration of active, full warfare against Germany, by the United States, the psychological effect upon British people, and upon the others who still oppose the Nazi war machine, will be invaluable.

For it is an accepted fact by all students and experts in warfare that, while British victory, without American co-operation to the full, hangs in precarious balance, with this country as an active ally, Germany's defeat is assured.

Meanwhile, although technically not at war, the Nazis are pressing the attack against us. There must be great rejoicing in Berlin, today, as news of the traitorous strikes which grip the defense industry here reaches that city.

Hitler has scored two victories against the United States. The stoppage of defense work constitutes one, and the destruction of a 5,000-ton steamer flying the United States flag constitutes the other.

If the sinking of the Robin Moor arouses the people of the United States—a certain minority of them—out of their inexplicable lethargy regarding the war menace, then it will serve good purpose.

If anything, the Ark Royal seems to have been improved by the many sinkings—like the flavor of the Georgia peach, twice killed by frost.

The average age of the current Hollywood favorites is found to be eight years under that of stars in the silent era, when a body squeak didn't show up in the sound track.

Georgia Editors Say: CONSERVING ELECTRIC POWER.

(From the Moultrie Observer.)
The Observer has not reached the condition of nerves over the subject of electric power shortage. The drought in the southeast could be extended far enough to bring about a very acute situation, and the nation as a whole will have to use power more economically than it has before, while so much is being required by war industries. The nation's power supply is not dependent on water. The Diesel engine and the old reliable coal burner plants also produce power. The power people can find a way to keep things going. Naturally they would prefer to cut down sales for a time rather than investing in new steam plants, buying Diesel engines or even overhauling some of the outmoded steam plants.

Moultrie has some responsibility in the matter. She should go along with the rest of the country adopting such measures as are generally adopted to reduce consumption of electric current while there is a shortage. This can be done without throwing things out of joint. We think that the average consumer of electric power will give such co-operation as his government asks him to give. The Washington government will certainly not expect the consumers, and especially the merchants and housekeepers, to shoulder the burden of solving the power problem.

A little more information about the power shortage would help. Have the power people done all it is possible for them to do to step up production? Are the available plants for generating electricity in Moultrie being put to work?

Is there a percentage or a quota of saving that would represent Moultrie's part? Is electricity being used for purposes not essential in this area?

Have we closed the bung before closing the spigot? Do we actually face trouble, or are we just scared?

THE WORLD TODAY

By COLONEL FREDERICK PALMER.

AUXILIARY FIRE FIGHTERS NEW YORK, June 10.—As a first step in his own city, Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia, who is in charge of national home defense, is having an auxiliary force of 30,000 organized as an adjunct of the New York City fire department to meet any emergency of incendiary bombing. But a talk with the "Two Daniels," as they refer to themselves, affords the highest expert opinion on the subject.

Daniel A. Deasy is the New York battalion fire chief, who, with his colleague, Battalion Chief Frederick J. G. Wedenmyer, was in London for three months as a guest of the London fire department. At their service now in a return visit is a London fire chief, Daniel Ivall, who has recently arrived in New York with Rudolph Haybrook and Clarence Palmer, of the London auxiliary, bringing the latest word of the control of incendiary fires in London.

Chief Ivall is now Chief Deasy's guest in the firehouse on Liberty street, in the business district of lower Manhattan. When the two chatted with me, it was the evening rush hour homeward, by subways, buses, street cars, and through the railroad stations. A city of 7,665,000 people seemed to have emptied into the streets to make the biggest target for bombing in the United States.

SHELTERS NOT YET PLANNED If New York had to go to the extremity of digging air raid shelters, excavation would not be so easy in the granite fishback of Manhattan itself as in the soft soil under London, or, say, Chicago. Out in the other boroughs, Brooklyn, Queens and Richmond, which make up Greater New York, the spade could get a better hold. Any construction of underground shelters in New York is not yet contemplated. People would have to take to the cellars in case of a raid.

New York's subways, being closer to the surface, would be more vulnerable than London's as a refuge. Hits by explosive bombs on the numerous bridges would dislocate traffic. If they penetrated the long railroad tunnel under Park avenue, some of New York's social life would be dislocated. New apartment houses are not so inflammable as New York's old tenements. Generally the construction of our cities, when not of wood, has the advantage of not being so old and is more fireproof than the British.

London's auxiliary went into active service when the war began. New York's, drawn from city employees, the American Legion and civil service and fire department eligible lists, will be trained to respond to call.

Chief Ivall says that actually all fires in London have been in control the day after a raid. New York's chiefs are sure the regular force can control any severe "political" bombing for propaganda effect and, with the aid of the new auxiliary, be equal to the emergency of such blasts as London has suffered.

WASHINGTON AS TARGET But New York is not our only big coast city or city near the coast. Boston is much exposed. There is Washington, the capital, where a proposal for a trial bombing was not approved by congress, but valuable historical documents are being listed with a view to their safe storage. Washington would be an obvious target for "political" bombings.

Any city with an immense area of wooden buildings would be in the most danger of fire. Explosive bombs would prepare the way for incendiaries in areas of wooden piers, warehouses full of inflammable stuff and oil storage tanks. A few hundred incendiary bombs scattered during the dry season in the forests of Maine or the northwest would start spreading circles of flame which might sweep over towns and villages built of wood.

No expert on the whole range of air raids sees any immediate danger for alarm even on our coasts. But none doubts the wisdom of home defense organizations for coastal cities, and cities near the coast, to be ready for whatever the future may bring.

CAN'T LEARN IN DAY Men in the auxiliary can no more learn in a day how to fight fires than a soldier can learn how to fight tanks; and no one knows this better than a man who has risen to leadership in the tough business of fighting fires and saving lives in either of the world's two largest cities.

The same truth applies to all forms of protection against air attacks when fighter planes, balloon barrages and anti-aircraft guns cannot prevent some bombers from getting through, and the bombers continue to fly higher and higher and to be more accurate.

Preliminary preparedness is the more important as a safeguard when most of our anti-aircraft guns and warplanes, as fast as we can produce them, are going to Britain.

Defense

Strikes.

I've been trying to get my mind away from these strikes in defense industry. There is so much in the papers, these days, on that subject it seemed to me to be advisable to talk about something else in this column, at least.

But the strike situation is so fearful, so staggering in its revelations, that I just can't think about anything else. So guess you'll have to put up with more strike dope, if you read this column at all, today.

It is unnecessary, however, for me to repeat what everyone knows, or should know, by now. That is, 75 per cent of the defense industry strikes are caused by Nazi agents, or Communists, or other enemies of the United States, who have wormed their way into union positions from which they can use the poor, deluded union members for their own subversive purposes. It has come to something when a few hundred enemies in this country can turn thousands of otherwise decent American workers into Fifth Columnists.

But what I've got in mind is an entirely different angle from that, and the other so-well known facts of the situation. What I've got to get on my mind is this: It might work, too.

Fighting Over

The Spoils.

In all the discussions of the strikes by sympathizers with, or active members of the unions, they've used one argument over and over again. That is, the industry is making big profits, for profits. Just like a couple of Kilkenny cats. Or like a couple of burglars so determined, each of them, to get the lion's share of the swag they can't see the law approaching.

Now there has been much talk in this country, that "this time" there's going to be no "war profiteering." The scandals of the last war, when many men got rich out of war contracts, are not to be repeated.

Well, why not do something, definite and conclusive, that will make impossible any war contract profits?

Why not pass a law stating that no industry, no capital, nobody, is to make a penny out of a war contract. Say, when a factory accepts a war contract, they accept it for fulfillment at actual cost. The government might give 'em enough to cover that cost, and a little over, with the proviso that when the contract is completed anything left out of the original payment is to be returned to the government.

Thus capital couldn't make anything at all out of the war. Labor would know this, and thus the big argument about huge "war profits" would be scotched at the source.

Also, labor and everyone else would know that, when a bunch of 'em demanded 35 cents an hour more pay, that extra pay was coming not out of the pockets of their employers, but directly from the taxpayers.

Why Profits,

Anyway?

Why should anyone make a profit out of the national emergency, anyway? If we're truly loyal Americans, we're glad at the opportunity to give all we have for our nation's survival. Don't we actually pledge "our property, our lives and our sacred honor" to her?

The men who go into the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, Aviation, etc., don't put on Uncle Sam's uniform for profit. They are giving a year out of their lives—or three years out of the country of which they are proud.

Well, why shouldn't investors, too, be willing to forego dividends for a year—or three years—like-wise? Why shouldn't they be satisfied with their financial status quo, for the period of the emergency, and look for resumption of dividends only after the emergency is passed.

And why shouldn't labor be satisfied with the status quo, too, for the period of the emergency? They surely could postpone wage increases, extension of the closed shop, new contract privileges, until we've completed the job of saving the nation.

If we don't forget all these little greeds and ambitions, we'll have no nation left to save. Let's all of us postpone benefits, profits, wage increases and the settlement of our family squabbles until we know the family is safe. Just now we've got to buckle down and all get to work on the only really important task—defense and war preparedness.

Nothing else counts at all. Not even fair wages, reasonable dividends on stock or investments. Not even, if it comes to that, individual life itself.

The ability to pronounce words properly and to enunciate each syllable distinctly is not a gift any more than is the solution of a mathematical problem. The majority of us learn to pronounce words properly by constant practice and repetition. We of this generation, have an

FAIR ENOUGH

By WESTBROOK PEGLER.

Study on NEW YORK, June 10.—Some days I shoot the sun in essays of the "whither-a-r-e-w-e-drafting?" type, and other days I give them the old who, what, when, where, why and how-come? This is one of those days, and the subject of our study is Harry Van Arsdale, the business agent of Local 3 of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, which is commonly said to be the biggest local, numerically, in the entire American Federation of Labor. It is a New York union and is really an industrial union of the CIO type, for the majority of its members are not electricians at all but factory workers who make fixtures and the like. They have an inferior, or robot, status in the union, lacking the voting powers of the skilled electricians.

Some months ago Mrs. Roosevelt appeared at a strike meeting of some of these factory workers in New York and said, among other things, that she thought all workers ought to join unions. It is possible that the lady was just speaking off the end of her tongue, or the top of her head and didn't know the background of the union, but if she didn't she should have, and if she did her advice was presumptuous from one in her position.

Mr. Van Arsdale was at that very time under indictment on a charge of rioting in connection with that very strike, and he has since been convicted and sentenced to serve from one to two years in Sing Sing. This is not his first conviction but his second, and, although his conviction in the previous case was reversed, the complaint finally was dismissed, the history of that job will give you an idea.

A preliminary hearing in the charge against Van Arsdale was held during the morning of May 27, 1933, at which Adelbert Leischer, another member of the opposition gave testimony. A few hours later, as he was walking along the street, he was attacked from behind by a man who threw acid in his face. He later testified to this, and this testimony, too, was stricken out. Indeed, the reversal of the conviction was based, in part, in the fact that the prosecutor, nevertheless, referred to this testimony in summing up.

Van Arsdale's sentence was from six to 12 years in Sing Sing, but the case was sent back on December 7, 1934, for retrial.

It was dismissed on May 1, 1935, on the recommendation of Robert Santangelo, an assistant district attorney, who wrote for the record that the injured men "have stated that they are no longer desirous of appearing against the defendants."

"The undersigned has also learned," Mr. Santangelo informed the court, "that because of the injuries which they suffered the union, on account of action brought by them against it, settled their claims for the injuries suffered by them in the amount of $15,000."

Could it have been, then, that $15,000 of the workers' money was handed over to the two injured brothers to persuade them to abandon the people's case against a man accused of a serious crime?

That would be a most unpleasant suggestion, involving the compounding of a felony, and it was anticipated and foretold by the brothers. True, Brother Van Arsdale was Tass, the union, but it was just a happy coincidence that after the wounded brothers were promised $15,000 out of the pockets of their fellow-workers they withdrew their complaint.

"They stated to the undersigned," Santangelo informed the court, "that they are not indicating their desire to withdraw this complaint because of this consideration but because the best interests of the union warrant that attitude."

Breathes there a soul so evil as to think otherwise?

advantage in that we can hear trained commentators pronouncing and using the words that we sometimes find difficult to pronounce correctly. All commentators do not pronounce all words exactly alike. Do not be dismayed; neither do all dictionaries recommend the same pronunciation. That is not a fault—it is merely a difference of opinion.

There is no excuse for mispronouncing common every-day words.

ONE WORD MORE

By RALPH MCGILL.

COMMUNIST TRIUMPH BUFFALO, N. Y., June 10.—As far as I can remember I never once have been foolish enough to write a piece saying this country was in danger of going Communist.

On the contrary, I have written many pieces saying we would never go Communist. The American isn't built that way. He doesn't think that way. He has too many savings accounts. He is making too many payments on a home or on furniture or on a radio or a car, to go Communist. We Americans aren't built that way. But we could go "strong man," and very easily, too.

And I think, for the first time, I see some signs of it. And for the first time I can, while feeling badly about it and not liking it, shrug my shoulders and say that those who most profess to oppose the idea of a strong man are doing the most to create one.

There no longer is any doubt of the fact that the Communists, as an Axis partner, are behind about 70 per cent of the labor trouble. There are, undoubtedly, industrialists who are trying to use the defense emotion to try and pay low wages and to maintain unfair working conditions. But any sane person must admit they are a minority. A very small one.

They have followed the old, familiar pattern of worming their way into positions of authority in labor unions. They were present in Detroit in the sit-down strikes of 1937. Today the new leaders have either kicked them out or relegated them to unimportant positions.

They can't do anything to this country except what they are doing—exploit the often just demands of labor to create trouble. At the North American plant the union leaders were in Washington before the Mediation Board. The Communists left behind pulled the strike and then boomed and discredited, as much as possible, the national CIO officials.

Yesterday in Cleveland, while leaders of the aluminum company local were in Washington, a Communist arrived from the coast and within about two hours after the troops went into the North American plant, the aluminum company workers were pulled out.

It is as plain as Stone Mountain on the horizon.

IT HAS DONE THIS We may as well face the problem. The Communists won the victory on the west coast. I heard many well-meaning people cheer the fact the troops went in. It was one of the worst things which could have been forced upon us. It had to be. But it was a Communist victory. That's what they wanted. They now have succeeded in causing the armed forces of the United States to take over a defense plant.

There now will follow charges, by the Communists, that the workers are being exploited. It will be said that the "bosses" have fought up the Army and are using it to crush unionism. The use of armed forces, pleading the rights of the workers. The old, familiar pattern will be followed. It is so obvious to anyone who can look beyond his nose that the wonder is we tolerate it.

The FBI knows these persons. They have known them for years. That explains the very vigorous attack on the FBI by the Communists and certain fellow traveler writers who tried to make, and still are trying to make, the FBI appear as an OGPU.

The FBI knows the Communists in America. The government and the CIO union, which seems to have most of them in its ranks, have done nothing about it. These things aren't hearsay. They are facts. They aren't gossip. They are authenticated truths. The great pity is that legitimate strikes, and there are legitimate strikes, must bear the onus of Communist-led strikes. There are industrialists trying to cheer, but, as I said before, they are few in number. They do not represent the attitude of the chief industrialists of the nation. I think, for instance, from what I have seen on this current tour of the defense plants, that the workers of the North American plant were asking for no more than other workers have. They were asking for 75 cents an hour for beginners. The Pratt & Whitney and other plants long have been paying that to men in their schools learning to be workers on engine parts and on assembly. The Communists simply were able to take those demands and, while the leaders were away, get the workers out. It is a responsibility of the government and of the CIO.

NO USE KIDDING There is no single reason to kid ourselves.

We are almost in a war. We are pledged to aid England. We are committed to a tremendous defense program. We are having normal, and anticipated difficulties, in getting it into production. No one is at fault. Our system simply isn't a war system. Our industrial setup is geared for peace and the production of consumer goods. Not for war. Germany's setup was geared so that in a day it could be switched to the production of war goods. Ours can't.

There is no use kidding ourselves. The Communists, some few hundred of them, have found their places in labor where they can exert their influence for harm.

There is not the slightest doubt but what they act on orders from Russia. This is not at all fantastic, but easy and simple. This country has never given up on Communism. There isn't the slightest danger of it, but because of the fact the Communists have been able to go along unmolested, they already have forced us to the point of using force. They think they have made progress toward breaking down our form of government. The fools think they are making progress toward Communism. The fools don't see they are building up the necessity for a strong man who will crush them as they deserve to be crushed. And we fools don't see that by tolerating them they are moving us away from our liberties and our system of free government and forcing us toward ruthlessness. The government and the CIO still have time to rid themselves of the two or three hundred causing the trouble.

First They Bind the Strong Man And Then Rob His House

By ROBERT QUILLEN.

The author of "Kabloona" tells a true story of Hudson's Bay Eskimos that should interest psychiatrists.

One Eskimo had crawled on top of an igloo to repair a hole in the roof. Two others, watching from inside the igloo, saw his clothing part, exposing his fat abdomen.

"That," said one, "would be a nice belly to stick a knife in."

Without a word, the other reached for his hunting knife and thrust.

There was no excuse for his action, for the man on the roof was a friend. The only explanation is found in the power of suggestion and the primitive hunter's inability to resist an impulse.

We are perhaps 20,000 years ahead of these Eskimos, yet the minds of the simple still function in much the same way. And any one of us may be driven by some strange compulsion to do a thing he has never reason nor desire to do.

Consider the case of a youth who attempts to enter and rob the office of a factory in his home town.

He has no reason to steal, for his parents are well-to-do and generous. He has at first no real intention to steal. He begins by innocently thinking about it.

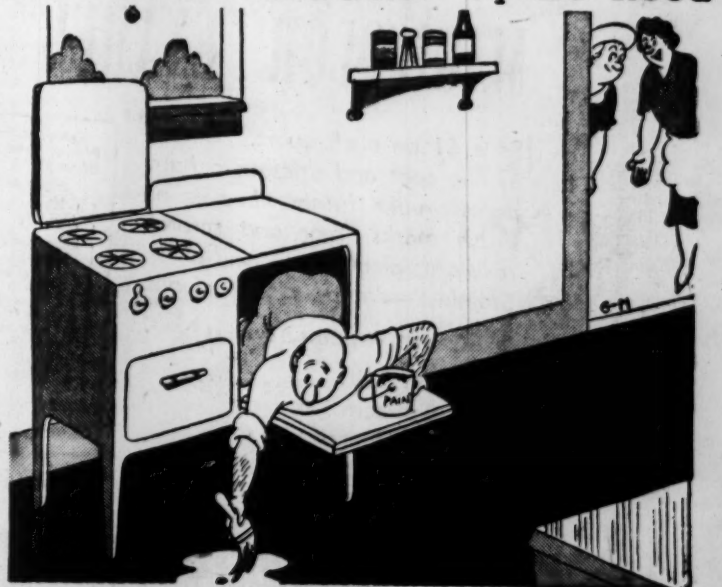

Soon the idea possesses him and he can think of nothing else. He plans every step he would take—not that he really intends to do such a thing, but if he were doing it. He even takes his father's pistol from a dresser drawer, for a robber might need a gun if there's a watchman about the premises.

The rest is a trance-like excitement, and he doesn't face cold reality again until he lies weeping in a cell, horrified and terrified, charged with murder and attempted robbery.

"Oh, my boy," moans the father, "why did you do such a crazy thing?" But the boy cannot explain, for he is asking himself the same question.

The mind can be servant or master, and it has mysterious powers that we dare not trifle with. The sin and danger is not in thinking an evil thought, but in entertaining it. Too long entertained, it takes control of the mind and will hear no protest till the evil thing is done.

OFF THE RECORD—By Ed Reed

"Last year he wound

Dudley Glass

In the Early County News Earl "Tige" Pickle writes of the record-breaking run of "Tobacco Road" and of its "lewd, sexist scenes" and "filth at its worst."

"Which," he says, "should give you an idea of how deep in degeneracy the American mind has sunk and also how abysmally low some people will stoop to make money."

I must take issue with Mr. Pickle. I don't think "Tobacco Road" ran eight years because it was filthy. Filthy shows have closed up in a few weeks for lack of patronage.

It ran eight years because it was a strongly written, intensely interesting and always well-acted play. The price of tickets prohibited temptation to children wandering home from school and looking for amusements. Adults able to buy tickets may be presumed to be well informed enough to know something of the book and the play and nobody took them by the scruff of the neck and forced them to attend.

Yes, it was—it seems to be in the past tense now—a dirty play. But it was a lot more than that. It was a study of social conditions in one little corner of America. It revealed how little we know of how some people struggle for a bare existence. Oh, yes, Lester and his family were lower down than a toad. They were lazy, shiftless, no-account, underserving. Not worth the powder and shot it would take to kill them, as the old saying goes.

But they were true to life—an infinitesimal section of life—in this great country of ours. It's too bad there are such sections. There are too many of them. In the big cities and in the backwoods. And we don't see them. No such folk live between my office and my home. So I don't see them. And I don't want to. I prefer to think that everybody is getting along fine and wonder why the devil we are soaked so much for "relief."

But let's take a further look at Mr. Pickle's comment on the degeneracy of the American mind.

Probably he is not well informed on the history of the American stage.

My memory is not encyclopedic and I have no dramatic reference books at hand.

Decent Plays Won.

But any oldtimer whose memory is good can count on his 10 fingers—if he uses them over and over—the great stage successes of 20 years past.

How many "dirty" shows were among them? Go ahead, count 'em.

John Golden, Broadway producer, prided himself on never presenting a line of dirt or a play that didn't at least hint a moral. "Turn to the Right" was one I remember. There were many others. They ran for many a month and paid huge profits.

Do you remember the remark-

Doesn't Think Americans Prefer Filth in Plays

able run of "Smiling Through." No dirt in that. Going away back, do you recall "Ben Hur," which ran until everybody from Broadway to Johnson's Cross-Roads had seen it? Any filth in that? Did you ever hear of Denman Thompson's "Old Homestead," which ran on and on and on? Or of "Abie's Irish Rose," which held sustained run records until "Tobacco Road" eclipsed them?

Once in a con's age, as we Georgians say, a play "full of dirt" makes a sensational hit.

But Broadway and the semi-amateur producers put on every year a number of plays which offer lines and situations hardly suitable for a Sunday school class. If they are clever and entertaining they survive—and play to a succession of audiences "sophisticated" folk, who represent one hundredth of one per cent of the "American mind," which has Mr. Pickle so worried.

No, Mr. Pickle, the American mind has not sunk to the depths. The editor of Variety, Broadway's weekly almanac of the drama, could add up box office receipts of the past ten or twenty or thirty years and demonstrate that "dirty" plays mopped up perhaps five per cent of the gate money. And surely we should let five per cent of the great American public—just the theater-going public—go to see and hear what appeals to them.

Maybe I'm part of that five per cent. Because I enjoyed "Tobacco Road" enormously and went to see it twice. I missed the motion picture, so I can't discuss that.

Get Well, Dean.

Dean de Ories, who was injured in an automobile accident near Swainsboro, Ga., has been brought home to a local hospital and is said to be getting along fine.

This kind of thing doesn't belong in my column. It's here because I like and admire the man so much. I've never heard him preach, but I've heard him talk. In public and across from my desk. He's a great fellow and full of charity toward all men—including sinners—and the milk of human kindness. And, most saving grace, he has a grand sense of humor.

If you have ever been tempted to draw a card to an "inside straight" regardless of the odds against your making it, you may take heart. A Milwaukee woman beat a game against odds of five quadrillion, if that means anything to you. But she wasn't trying, which always makes it easier. The story is from the Milwaukee Journal.

A woman injured in an accident telephoned her physician at Marquette 4442. Then she called her attorney at Marquette 4443. Next she called an insurance company physician—Marquette 4444. The offices of the three people called were at different locations. "A Milwaukee mathematician estimated that the chances of selecting three Milwaukee telephone numbers at random and finding them in sequence was about one in 4,911,526,198,260,000."

Good Morning

By LOUIE D. NEWTON.

The Detroit News, on Sunday, May 11, 1941, page 15 of section devoted to general news, published a page advertisement, paid for by the employees of the Currier Lumber Company, under the title "Let Freedom Ring." The statement explains that the Currier Lumber Company produces approximately 25 per cent of the lumber in Detroit. Let me quote a few of the significant sentences in this page advertisement of the employees of this big concern:

"The American workman is blessed above all workers of the world. Chief among these blessings is the civil and moral right to make his own decisions. This fundamental right is guaranteed every American by the constitution of the United States and by the sound moral reasoning upon which this democracy is founded. "We, employees of the Currier Lumber Company, prize this right above all our possessions. But, in spite of all the safeguards of law and government, agitators from outside our midst are using strong-arm methods to deny us our rights. They are denying us the right to our own decisions. They are denying us our rights to go about our work as we will. They are threatening us, collecting in mobs to taunt and ridicule us—they are ganging up in ruthless brutality to beat and pummel us. "The law guarantees us the right to join or to refrain from joining any group we choose. We, the average American workmen, have the moral and legal right to decide. Only those who are in fundamental disharmony with America and its ideals would deny us this right by rule of club and fist. It is not the way of Americans to gather in surly mobs, fortified by clubs and brickbats, to stop workmen from carrying on their important tasks—tasks which they know and love.

"Last Friday afternoon, for example, two Currier employees were driving to the plant. A mob of nearly 100 men stalked them for several miles, finally bombarded the truck with bricks and stones and forced to the curb. Quickly the 'brave mob' swung the driver and his helper and tried to smash the truck. They ran in hurried retreat when a crowd gathered."

The statement then goes on to say: "This is a job for the public. We need your support in this battle for our rights and our freedom. "What, you may well ask, were the Detroit police doing the other afternoon when the mob attacked the two men in the truck? The statement of the employees of Currier gives this answer to that pertinent question: "The Detroit police department is doing a magnificent job in the face of terrible odds. "One might further ask what the Governor of Michigan is doing to give protection to these men who want to work. We have no information on that point. Or what is the government of the United States doing to protect them? No answer is given in the statement.

But somebody has got to find the answer to the plea of these American citizens in Detroit if democracy is to survive. The statement closes with these phrases, in large letters: "Americans must fight for freedom! Help us in our struggle to preserve our civil liberties!"

Sun Suits and Shorts Worn to Weekly Meeting.

So you think it's too hot to wear your trousers and you think it's too hot to wear your tie. Then you're an Optimist if you think you can get by with shorts and a sport shirt.

Members of the Atlanta Optimist Club decided it was too hot to attend their weekly meeting yesterday in business suits—so they wore their sun suits, beach clothes, slacks, sports shirts, and all that kind of stuff.

They preferred a cold luncheon to the course meal. But they had their meal—and that wasn't unusual. They had their program, their songs—and they weren't unusual. But they didn't wear as many clothes—and that is unusual.

$21,500 Pledged Toward Atlanta Area Goal of $90,000.

With $21,500 pledged or subscribed to the United Service Organization appeal for funds to finance service men's community centers, the Atlanta area campaign workers this morning will start the second week of the drive toward a goal of $90,000.

Yesterday's subscriptions, turned in at headquarters, 82 Broad street, N. W., amounted to nearly $3,000. This was the largest sum reported on any one day since the campaign started with the exception of the opening day, when the advanced gifts committees made their first report.

Some Unreported. Several large divisions of the volunteer army conducting the canvass had not made their first report at the time the consolidated statement was prepared. For this reason, it is known that the figures reported daily are considerably less than the funds subscribed but still in the hands of division and team leaders.

C. A. Tevebaugh, southern regional representative of the USO, yesterday indicated that Atlanta still has an opportunity to be the first city in its population group in the south to go over the top.

He said New Orleans, on the first day subscribed $64,000 of a $100,000 quota, but had not obtained the balance. It is understood that this city conducted an extensive pre-campaign canvass.

Techwood Rally. Major Trammell Scott, Atlanta campaign chairman, and Mrs. Francis Dwyer, co-chairman of the women's division, last night spoke to residents of the Techwood and Clark Howell Homes at the Techwood community center.

The first "report luncheon" of the women's division will be held Saturday at noon at Rich's tearoom, Mrs. Philip Graves, chairman, announced yesterday. The women's division is working the residential sections of Atlanta and has turned in reports from only a few team leaders.

Eugene Gunby, chairman of the speakers' bureau, will address Regent's employees at 8:25 o'clock this morning and the Building Owners and Managers at 1 o'clock at the Piedmont hotel.

Tolstoy Writes LeCraw for Lecture Aid

Son of Late Novelist Wants to Speak Through South.

Does anybody want a job as manager of Count Leo Tolstoy Jr. on a lecture tour of the United States, in which he will explain in detail how war may be abolished and eternal peace established in the world?

If so, Mayor LeCraw can make all the arrangements. The mayor had a letter from the son of the late great Russian novelist and social reformer the other day. It came from Halmbyboda, Upsala, Sweden, and it intimated that the Count has found a solution to the world's problems if he can just arrange to get his message to the public.

"My Dear Mayor," the Count began.

"Please excuse me this letter . . . I have the intention of coming once more to your country as soon as this war will be over, and this time with a great special message. An address on the ways and methods of organizing in the world a stable and permanent peace."

" . . . If the war will be finished this autumn I should like to come to the States in the month of September, 1942. If the war will last a year more, I would come for the season 1943-44 and so on, as long as I live.

"The subject of my address will be 'Suppression of Wars and Edification of Permanent Peace. (a) What Is War? (b) Why Is War? (c) How War Can Be Abolished."

The son of the author of "War and Peace" and "Anna Karenina," like his father, is one whose mind dwells among the clouds. But there is a practical, common-sense streak in him, too. He knows what he wants in the way of money. He distrusts professional tour managers.

"I would like, if possible, to organize my future trip without the mediocrity of specific professional managers, but with the help of kind friends who should be morally and financially interested in it . . . Can you be so infinitely kind as to find and recommend me in your state an intelligent and energetic permanent resident who could organize for me lectures in the months of March and April, 1943, or 1944 (the year will depend on the future world events) in N. Ca., S. Ca., Georgia and Florida?"

"My financial conditions would be as follows: 100 doll. for one lecture and 150 for two if in the same town or in two neighboring towns, on two consecutive evenings."

When the Count begins to speak of remuneration for his manager, his English, hitherto fairly lucid, begins to become slightly tangled. He says:

"When the talk will be organized by my manager he will take care of himself of his profits (halls, tickets, advertising, etc.), but when the invitations will be for private homes with the same fee of 100 doll., 25 per cent them will go to the manager."

"Also I would like my hotel room and some railway tickets paid in advance. When the time will come, before sailing to the states, I should ask my managers to send me 20 doll. from each lecture booked so that I would have sufficient sum for my voyage."

Down toward the close of the letter, though, the Count had a better idea than a tour which would depend solely for its success upon the pleasure of the people. He wrote:

"It should be delightful if some wealthy and wise American person, having faith in my mission, could help me by financing my trip and plan for the triumph of peace and happiness on our planet. I know the right ways to them and will show them to the world. If such financial help and encouragement of 2,000 doll. should fall from heaven from a noble heart for this purpose, I could come to the states as soon as possible, maybe at once."

The mayor made the count's letter public in hope that some "intelligent and energetic" person would be interested.

Nation's Perils Are Outlined at Club Institute

Mrs. Ralph Butler Opens Two-Day Session at Athens.

ATHENS, Ga., June 10.—(AP)—A nation will have democracy only when men and women together carry on the activities which make for good government and better living, Mrs. George W. Jaqua, past president of the Indiana Federation of Women's Clubs, told Georgia clubwomen here today.

"There is but one chief enemy to the effectiveness of our national defense," she said at the two-day conference of the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs institute on the University of Georgia campus.

"That enemy is loss of co-operation and unity, apathy and indifference to the fact that emergency exists for our country," she said.

The need of national defense calls for men and women who are mentally alert and physically fit to put into practice the projects of true American citizenship," the Indiana woman said.

"Our people must be high in moral stamina, resolute in their conviction of right, ready to stand and sacrifice for their convictions," she said.

Mrs. Jaqua urged women to keep well informed about the market situation and to be alert in watching prices and supplies. "Widespread poverty and malnutrition are veritable pistols pointed at the country's heart," she said. She suggested that women study local government so that a crisis they might be of help.

Mrs. Ralph Butler, of Dallas, president of the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs, opened the institute after university officials had welcomed the delegates to the campus.

Mrs. Lamar Rucker, of Athens, gave a history of the Georgia Club Institutes, and Mrs. Albert Hill, of Greenville, led a discussion on the subject "Women and National Defense."

H. Lane Young, president of the bank, announced that the 3 per cent payments will amount to approximately $150,000.

The British said five German bombers attacking warships off the Lebanon coast were shot down and that the RAF bombed the Aleppo airdrome.

A minimum of interference on the part of the invading forces with lives and property of Syrian Nationalists was reported, and the Nationalists, given a British-Free French pledge of full independence, were said here to be "obviously pleased."

It was admitted by the French that martial law had been established in Beirut. These sources also said that a minimum of resistance was being offered, asserting Vichy troops in advance positions had laid down their arms.

Enemy fighters which attempted to bomb British motor transport were driven off, it was stated.

House Group Votes To Retain Exemptions at Present Level

Single Persons Making Less Than $800, Married Couples Earning Below $2,000 Will Continue Untouched.

WASHINGTON, June 10.—(AP)—Single persons making less than $800 and married couples earning below $2,000 would continue to be exempt from individual income taxes, under a decision today by the House Ways and Means Committee.

Writing a $3,500,000,000 new tax bill to help finance the defense program, the committee voted to retain the current personal exemptions for all individual income tax purposes. This means also continuance of the present $400 credit for dependents, such as children.

(Of the 16,000,000 persons who filed returns this year on their 1940 income, only about half actually paid taxes, the remainder going tax free because the total of their exemptions, credits and deductions was greater than their gross income.)

Stiffer Rates.

New income tax rates, expected to be much stiffer than those now applying, were left to future determination. Committee members indicated a vote might be taken on that tomorrow.

In deciding to keep the personal exemptions at the present level, the committee followed Treasury recommendations against broadening the income tax base to include lower income brackets. The Treasury said present exemptions were low enough in the face of a danger of rising living costs.

Several committee witnesses, however, had recommended base broadening and some committee members had shown an inclination in that direction.

Retain Exemptions.

The committee voted Saturday to retain the present exemptions for surtax purposes. The vote today was to keep them for normal taxes also, meaning they would be the bottom level for all individual income taxes.

Another committee decision reduces the total exemption of "heads of families," who are not husbands or wives.

At the present time, a widow who has one child is allowed $2,000 as "head of the family" and $400 "credit for dependent." The committee adopted a motion to disallow "the $400 exemption for the first dependent who makes it possible for the head of the family to qualify as such." This would cut the above widow's total exemption to $2,000.

Dog Keeps Police From His Master

Radio Patrolmen E. G. Cowan and W. F. Jones of the Atlanta police are thoroughly convinced that man's best friend is his dog. Cruising up to the intersection of Piedmont avenue and Pine street yesterday morning, the two officers noticed the prone form of a man on the corner and a big police dog by his side.

The dog refused to let the officers touch his master, keeping them at bay for 20 minutes, although he didn't seem to mind being petted himself.

A passer-by who identified the man to the officers awakened him by shouting his name. Arrested, the man stumbled into the patrol car and called his dog, "Bozo," to follow.

Police booked the man at city jail as J. C. Wilbanks, of a North avenue address, on a charge of being drunk.

Tuxedo Hunt Club To Stage Innovation in Horse Shows

By SALLY FORTH.

• • • • MADDER THAN the Mad Hatter, goofier than the four Marx brothers, and more laugh-provoking than a circus clown is the forthcoming horse show to be presented by the members of the Tuxedo Hunt Club on Saturday afternoon, June 21. "A horse show to please horses, judges and exhibitors," the affair will take place at 1:30 o'clock at the Tuxedo Hunt Club ring, and will provide spectators with a never-to-be-forgotten afternoon of fun and merriment. Furthermore, admission is free!

There will be no entry fee, and exhibitors are asked to call Sam Hart, chairman, at Cherokee 9919. Ribbons will be awarded every entry in each class, but the better ribbons will go to first, second, third and fourth places.

The judges will be kept a dark mystery until the very last minute, for they will be selected at random at the time each class is called. Exhibitors, incidentally, are not expected to have the proper respect for judges, except in Class 14, the children's horsemanship class.

Questionable decisions that might arise during the afternoon will be settled by the judge and the contestant in the center of the ring. An elegant trophy will be awarded to the winner, be he the judge or the contestant!

Dinner will be served to all, provided they bring their own box supper. According to the list of rules: "No box—no supper."

The members of the club, who are headed by Goodloe Yancey as president, have termed their horse show a "frolic." To Sally's way of thinking, "picnic" is a better description, judging from some of the rules!

For instance, the pair class is designated as "One horse—two people to ride. Two horses—one person to ride." And in the three-gaited class, horses are to be shown at five gaits as called by the judge, while in the five-gaited class the horses are to be shown at three gaits as called by the judge.

The fine harness class and the tiny tots' horsemanship classes are expected to provide some of the afternoon's merriest entertainment. In the first, goats, mules and "what have you?" will be shown, and in the second, the age of the "tiny tots" is limited to entrants from 40 to 60 years of age.

The winner of the pleasure class will be the one giving the roughest ride, and the free-for-all class will include anything with four feet.

Never in the history of Atlanta has there been a horse show with such elastic rules—rules that are bound to make the classes as amusing for the exhibitors as for the spectators.

Miss Verna Allene Meek, who is the popular young daughter of Mrs. J. F. Meek, will become the bride of Ralph Purcell at a ceremony to take place Saturday.

Sons and Daughters Of Pilgrims To Meet.

Invitations have been issued to the state meeting of the Sons and Daughters of the Pilgrims which occurs on Friday. The meeting will be held in Davidson's Robert E. Lee room at 3 o'clock. Reports from the national meeting in Washington will be given and the program will feature Flag Day. The board will meet at 2 o'clock.

Don't fail to be on hand for this side-splitting exhibition of ring events, unless you want to miss what portends to be "the time of your life!"

and her son, Harold Jr., have a grand time in store for them! They leave on Saturday for a western trip which will last well into July and will include all the interesting spots that tourists normally visit, in addition to a great many more.

Heading west by the southern route, the Cooleges will stop at the Grand Canyon before going on to Los Angeles. In the latter city, Mrs. Coolege, who, as you know, is the Atlanta Music Club's capable president, will attend the convention of the National Federation of Music Clubs from June 19 to 25, while Harold amuses himself with visiting the movie studios and other points of interest.

From Los Angeles the Atlantans will go to San Francisco, Seattle and Vancouver. Then they will take a boat for a ten-day trip to Alaska. On their return, they will visit Banff Springs and beautiful Lake Louise.

• • • • SOCIAL LIFE is growing interesting daily at Lakemont, that picturesque summer resort on Lake Rabun. Every weekend Atlantans motor there to join various house parties and to enjoy the cool breezes which blow from the lake. Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Hodgson spent the weekend at their cottage.

Mr. and Mrs. George Weyman with their children, Ann and Margaret Weyman, are occupying the Lipscomb cottage. Mr. and Mrs. F. D. Burge are spending this week at Bluebird cottage and are enjoying the pleasures that abound at Lakemont.

Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Hanes are in residence at Hill-house, where they will spend the entire summer. Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Prescott have opened their home at the far end of Lake Rabun.

• • • • ORIGINALITY is the keynote of the parties at which Dot Frank is being complimented prior to her marriage to James T. Jones on June 21. Sunday afternoon Addie Lou Gilbert was hostess at a tea at her home on Callan circle. When Dot was a baby her father, Vernon Frank, was president of a Sunday school class in Wesley Memorial church and baby Dot was the class mascot. The guests at the tea were members of that Sunday school class.

An attractive party given by Mrs. Furman Hines at her home on Meade road was of special interest, in that most of the guests were friends who went through Oakhurst and Decatur high schools together, and, in some cases, took their college work together. Mrs. Hines, the former Virginia Kreuger, and Dot were classmates from kindergarten through their school years.

Mrs. W. A. Dodge was hostess at her summer home in Pine Lake and no one was invited except those who were at Dot's baby shower 21 years ago.

Possibly the most original shower given for the bride-elect is being planned by Dot's aunt, Mrs. C. E. Newell, who lives in a trailer at Camp Jackson, where Dr. Newell is stationed. Mrs. Newell has issued invitations for a handkerchief shower on Monday—a party by mail. The handkerchiefs are to be mailed to the hostess, who will relay them later to the honor guest, probably in the form of a gay bouquet. As for refreshments, Mrs. Newell included a

Mrs. Broadbent Feted Here During Visit to Mrs. Yancey

The June social calendar is being enlivened by the series of gay parties planned for Mrs. S. A. Broadbent, of Washington, D. C., who is the guest of Mrs. Goodloe Yancey at her home in Druid Hills. Mrs. Broadbent resided here until four years ago and has many friends in Atlanta.

On Sunday afternoon, Mr. and Mrs. Yancey will entertain a limited number of friends at a cocktail party at Brookhaven, the Capital City Country Club, in honor of their guest. Today, Mrs. Broadbent will be central figure at the breakfast to be given by Mrs. E. A. Kalkhurst, who entertains at home.

Two parties have been planned for tomorrow, the first being the luncheon to be given by Mrs. Evan McConnell, who will entertain at her home in Druid Hills. Tomorrow evening, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Canfield will be hosts at a party at the opening of the Capital City Club roof garden for the Washington visitor.

Miss Marion Dean has planned a luncheon for Friday at her home on Ponce de Leon avenue honoring Mrs. Broadbent, and, on Saturday, Mrs. Howard See will give a luncheon at the Piedmont Driving Club. In the evening of the same day, Mrs. E. D. Lester will be hostess at a party at her country home near Stone Mountain.

Next Monday, June 16, Mrs. J. V. Pierson will honor the visitor at a luncheon at her home, and, on June 17, Mrs. R. W. Wilby will entertain at a luncheon at her home on Tuxedo road. On June 18, Mrs. Edward Wright gives a luncheon for Mrs. Yancey and her guests and, on June 19, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Hodgson and Mr. and Mrs. S. A. Johnson entertain at an evening party for Mrs. Broadbent. Mr. and Mrs. Yancey and Mrs. Broadbent will be dinner guests of Dr. and Mrs. J. G. Williams at the Capital City Club on June 18.

Clark-Goodyear Wedding Plans

Social interest centers today in the announcement of the wedding plans of Miss Julia Ann Clark, of Greenville, Ga., and her fiancé, Dr. William Evans Goodyear, of Emory University, the ceremony to be an event of June 14, taking place at 4:30 p. m. at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Louis C. Clark in Greenville.

Rev. Eugene L. Daniel will officiate, and the musical program will be presented by William A. Fleming Jr. and Dr. Curtis Bowman.

Miss Louise Clark will be maid of honor and Mrs. Thomas O. Fleming will be matron of honor. Dr. Goodyear will be attended by J. Dickey Goodyear and Nolan A. Goodyear will be groomsmen.

After the ceremony, Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Clark, parents of the bride-elect, will entertain at a reception.

Officers Elected By Phi Sigma Psi.

Phi Sigma Psi officers for the coming year are Miss Carolyn Ahlgren, president; Norma Jane Rader, vice president; Dotsie Leming, executive secretary; Connie Frizzell, recording secretary; Katherine Barfield, treasurer; June Ann Rader, publicity chairman; Betty Atwood, sergeant-at-arms; Polly Houston, scrapbook chairman. The new officers were elected at the meeting Friday at the home of Miss Katherine Barfield on North Decatur road.

Thursday the sorority will entertain the pledges at a swimming party and picnic, and the last meeting of the season will be held Friday at the home of Miss Carolyn Ahlgren.

nickel with each invitation, with instructions that at 3 o'clock on Monday each guest, wherever she may be, is to drink a Coca-Cola to the bride-to-be.

Mr. and Mrs. William I. Crichton, of Cordele, formerly of Atlanta, announce the birth of a son, William Innes Jr., on June 9.

Mr. and Mrs. James G. Hardy Jr. announce the birth of a daughter, Marjorie Anne, on June 6 at Georgia Baptist hospital. Mrs. Hardy is the former Miss Marjorie O'Kelley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George O'Kelly. The baby's paternal grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. J. Gordon Hardy Sr.

Mrs. Neely Speaks At Welfare Meeting.

Mrs. Frank Neely told the audience at the Child Welfare open meeting last evening that, in the present plight of the world, the welfare of the individual child and his development into a splendid citizen of tomorrow is of the utmost importance. She stated that this job should go hand in hand with the preservation of our great democracy for our children.

Colored moving pictures of the children under the care of the Child Welfare Association and of the foster mothers who serve many of them, the professional staff that directs the work and of the board of directors were shown, as well as the documentary film, "The Children Next Door."

Mrs. Harrison Hines, W. P. Nicholson Jr., Charles Currie and Robert Sams, directors of the association, formed a panel of experts and were quizzed by Harold T. Patterson as master of ceremonies in an "Information, Please" program.

The purpose of the annual open meeting is to acquaint the public with the function and work of the Child Welfare Association. Mrs. Neely said the spirit of the association was presented in such a program, while the statistics, always open for inspection, give the facts.

Miss Tate's Party.

Miss Joan Tate will entertain a group of the high school contin-gent at a steak fry this evening at "Pine Ridge," the country home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Tate, of Spalding drive.

Miss Tate is a popular member of the Pi Pi sorority, and she will be assisted in entertaining by her parents.

Hobart was the officiating minister.

Music was rendered by Mrs. Gertrude L. Johnson, pianist, and Mrs. Elma Hauser, vocalist. The bride was given in marriage by her brother, Kermit B. Ward, and her only attendant was Mrs. Reggie Ward, who was gown in heavenly blue lace-over-blue taffeta, with accessories of beige. Her flowers were sweetheart roses.

The bride wore a model of ashes of roses, triple sheer, with navy accessories. Her flowers were white gardenias.

Palms and ferns formed an effective background for the ceremony, with antique candelabra holding white tapers. The mother of the bride was gown in ice blue chiffon over taffeta, and wore a shoulder bouquet of sweetheart roses. The groom's mother wore gown in powder blue lace over taffeta and wore Talsman buds. After the ceremony a reception

Miss Sihler and Mr. Branch Marry at Brilliant Rites

LITCHFIELD, Ill., June 10.—The St. Aloysius church here formed the setting this afternoon at 4:30 o'clock for the marriage of Miss Mary Elizabeth Sihler, of this city, and James Alexander Branch Jr., of Atlanta, Rev. Father Michael J. O'Mullane officiating at the fashionable rites.

Guy Miller Snell, of Litchfield, Ill., organist, played musical selections. A profusion of summer flowers and cathedral candelabra holding glowing white tapers formed the artistic decorations.

Ushers were Bert McWilliams, Dr. C. H. Sihler, uncle of the bride, both of Litchfield; and Robert C. Crowe, of Coral Gables, Fla.

Miss Sarah Rawson Smith, of Atlanta, was maid of honor, her gown having been of ice blue mousseline fashioned with a muffled bodice, a square neck and puffed sleeves banded with matching lace. The lace was repeated on the full skirt, and her off-the-face leghorn hat was trimmed with matching blue taffeta ribbon.

She carried a bouquet of white daisies encircled with puffs of blue mousseline.

Mrs. Robert Cuneo Crowe, of Coral Gables, Fla., was her sister's matron-of-honor. Her gown and flowers were like those of Miss Smith.

Dr. George A. Sihler gave his lovely daughter in marriage. The bride's dainty beauty was enhanced by a beffuffed gown of white mousseline featuring bishop sleeves and lace insets, and her veil fell from a bonnet trimmed with orange blossoms. She carried a prayer book topped with a white orchid showered with orange blossoms, and wore the spray pin of diamonds and pearls given her mother by her father 27 years ago.

The bride's parents were hosts at a reception at their home after the ceremony, daisies and other white flowers having beautified the reception rooms.

Mrs. Sihler was becomingly gowned in white embroidered linen with pink gloves, a pink picture hat and orchids. Mrs. James A. Branch, of Atlanta, mother of the groom, wore flesh pink chiffon with a matching hat and orchids.

Mr. Branch and his bride will make their future home in Atlanta, where they will be welcomed by a host of friends.

An easily prepared yet substantial dish is this of spaghetti with curried shrimps.

Substantial Dish Can Be Made Easily

By Sally Saver.

Even though the weather is hot, the body needs food and plenty of it. So don't fall into the habit of serving up knick-knacks or meals with too delicate an air. Most people in offices or at business work as hard in summer as they do any other season, and children are apt to use up as much energy at summer play as they do in the class room. Many light dishes can advantageously be served but by all means have at least one substantial dish in every meal. To save time and energy keep the emergency shelf filled with canned beans, canned meats and fish and canned cooked spaghetti. Here is a substantial dish which can be prepared on short notice from the emergency shelf:

Spaghetti With Curried Shrimps.
I can shrimps or fresh cooked

shrimps
2 tablespoons butter or margarine.
1-2 teaspoon curry powder
1 tablespoon chopped onion
1 1/2-cup can cook spaghetti in tomato sauce.
Clean shrimps, if necessary.
Melt butter in skillet then add curry and onion and cook until onion is tender but not brown. Add shrimps and saute. Open can of spaghetti and heat thoroughly. Serve on platter with shrimps at side. Serves 4.

This, with a congealed vegetable salad or a tossed salad of raw mixed vegetables and a dessert such as boiled custard with cookies or a refrigerator pie would make an appetizing and balanced summer dinner.

For help with cooking, menu-planning, or problems of serving, or for special recipes write or phone Sally Saver, care The Constitution, or Walnut 6565.

Checking Up On Man Is a Mistake

Dear Dixie:

Sometime ago, a man I have been going with for several months told me he was leaving town on a certain date. I asked him to call me up and tell me good-bye, but the days went by and he did not call. I assumed that he had had to leave town sooner than he expected. But one day last week I saw his car parked on the street. I have seen it several times since then, but I have not heard from him. What I want to know is: Should I call him and tell him good-bye or wait for him to call me? I hate to think of his going away and knowing that I may never see him again. There are so many things I want to tell him, and if I do not tell him before he leaves I will never have an opportunity. What do you think? He is going away to accept another position.

By all means do not call him or contact him in any way, whatsoever. If he said he would call to tell you good-bye and did not do it, he just did not want to, and that's that.

Perhaps he will call you yet. If he is leaving town he may have a lot of things to do and has not had the time to get in touch with you. Don't be dramatic about it, and think he will never come back or that you will never see him again. If he thinks enough of you he will come back. You will lose all prospects of holding him, if he thinks you are checking up on him by watching his car. Men don't like women who are suspicious.

BOY'S BASHFULNESS IS ONLY PROBLEM

Dear Dixie:

I have known a certain girl for about seven years and like her very much, and I think that she likes me. Somehow I have just let time pass and have not asked her for a date. She is a very nice girl, very smart, and has just finished high school. She can sew, cook and keep house. I have thought very seriously about dating her and later on asking her to marry me. I have no bad habits and work every day. I think she would make a fine wife for me. But here is the problem: She is a little bashful and does not talk very much. What would you suggest? How must I ask her for a date? She is the first girl I ever met whom I liked so much. And she is beautiful, too.

WORRIED BOY.

From your letter I think the situation sounds just about perfect. As for her being bashful, I think you are the one who has been that way.
You should be glad that she is a bit reserved in her manner and does not talk much. These are two characteristics which are very much admired. As for asking her for a date, just ask her, and that's that.

POINTS FOR PARENTS

Lady Mendl Prefers Moderation To Dieting

By Ida Jean Kain.

The proper way to tell you about Lady Mendl would be to begin "once upon a time there was a little girl so plain that although her parents loved her just as much, they did occasionally wish she might have been born better looking." You know the ending. The little girl grew up to become celebrated in the great cities of the world for her wit, charm, chic and good looks.

At these meetings with celebrities, I feel that I am acting as your proxy and try to ask the questions which will interest you. Lady Mendl has been cited as one of the internationally best dressed women so often that one of my first questions was: "Do you consider it necessary to have a good figure in order to be well dressed?"

And the quick reply was: "I cannot imagine a well-dressed woman who did not possess a good figure." I can assure you that hers is streamlined. She weighs 105 pounds for her height of five feet, four inches. Since her frame is tiny and she radiates health, that weight does not appear too slight. Rather, it bears out the scientific theory that after 40 it is an advantage to weigh somewhat less than the standard. When you are with Lady Mendl, it doesn't occur to you to wonder how old she is. The statistics say she is considerably past 40.

She told me, emphatically, that she never diets and that moderation is the whole secret of keeping her weight down. "But," she added, "I do not believe in eating oneself to death four meals a day." Her vitality is evidence of intelligently chosen menus. A favorite luncheon consists of a plain chicken sandwich, made with graham bread, and a glass of milk.

Is it really true that she makes a habit of standing on her head? "Of course I stand on my head," she said matter-of-factly. "I can stand on my head as easily as I can stand on my feet. I used to do it as a parlor trick. But I've stopped that"—a mischievous snort isn't dignified for one of my stars.

Stand on her head she does, every day, as part of a 20-minute exercise program. She varies her calisthenics but always does a few stretchers and two rather strenuous hip slimmers. One is the old upside-down bicycle—weight supported on back of shoulders, hips elevated on hands, one knee drawn down to chest as the other is thrust straight up in air. The other starts off in about the same position, but legs are kept straight, feet together, and toes touched to floor beyond head, then legs are shuttled back and forth. Her hip-line measures a slim 33, with other measurements in proportion.

Obviously one of the chief reasons people like Lady Mendl is that she likes people. Within five minutes after my arrival, about 50 friends also arrived. That doesn't exactly make for a cozy interview! But I did have a chance to ask whether she had had to work for that graceful posture and was told that she began as a child to hold herself erect, and that she practiced walking with a book on her head for poise.

Perhaps you would be interested to know what one of the world's best dressed women was wearing that afternoon—a very simply designed black satin frock, with pearls and a clip for ornaments, and wrist length white gloves. The less money you have for clothes, the more important your figure becomes. Send a large stamped return envelope for Ida Jean Kain's "Hips, Hips—Away!" and "Posture Makes the Figure." MY DAY: Hilton's Book Has Delightful Philosophy

By Eleanor Roosevelt.

WASHINGTON, Monday.—I arrived in Washington last evening about 7:30 to find that the President was able to stay on the "Potomac" until this morning. I spent the evening straightening out the various things which had accumulated on my desk. Today is comparatively free. Breakfast on the porch was really delightful and leisurely.

I was interested to see that Miss Gizelle Shaw, of Buenos Aires, speaking to the eastern regional conference of the National Woman's Party, remarked that South America was not flattered to have Mr. Douglas Fairbanks Jr. as an envoy from this country.
I think Miss Shaw must have made this statement under a misapprehension, for Mr. Fairbanks went only as an ambassador of good will to study the particular subject of the movie industry as it affects our relationship with our South American neighbors. He is extremely well fitted to make this study and, on returning, to put his findings before his own industry.

Miss Shaw makes the suggestion that South America would have been more flattered had we sent a scientist or an educator. I think again, she perhaps does not quite know the scope of the program being carried out under the Department of State and Mr. Nelson Rockefeller.
In some cases one wonders if, perhaps, too many people in different fields of endeavor are not flooding the South American countries today in their search for knowledge and their desire to bring a better understanding to this country of our neighbors to the south.
I was particularly impressed in St. Paul, Minn., by the panel on hemisphere defense conducted under Miss Josephine Schain's leadership. Madame Graciela Munduano, whom the Business and Professional Women's Clubs are sponsoring on a lecture trip in the United States, did a magnificent job, both as a member of the panel and as a speaker at the luncheon. Her approach was so charming and simple that everyone was interested in her presentation of rural conditions in Chile, and I was really thrilled to see the interest of the women in St. Paul in all she had to tell them.

We have some young guests in the house, for three of the Hopkins children are here just now. It is nice to know that the weather is not going to make life out of doors impossible for them.

Yesterday I finished a little book of stories about "Mr. Chips" that Mr. James Hilton gave me. He is the hero of the book published in this country called "Good-bye, Mr. Chips," by James Hilton. This book I just read has never been published here, but I think it should be, for there are many things in Mr. Chips' philosophy which would be of value, not only to schoolmasters, but to us all. One quotation we can remember with profit:

"One of the lovely joys of growing old was to add to this list of trivial things one didn't care about, so one had more time to care about the things that are not trivial."

Personal daintiness is an important part of looking as cool and fresh as Anne Gwynne, Universal actress. With modern deodorants and antiperspirants, it is a simple matter for all of us to keep ourselves charming in this respect.

Cream Insures Summer Daintiness

By Winifred Ware.

Keeping dainty in hot weather is no mere accident, but it can be a very simple matter.

Of course, we know that the main problem of summer daintiness is perspiration. No amount of bathing will guard against it and its disagreeable aspects . . . body odor and ugly, stained dresses. It's up to us, then, to take other steps so that we can be sure, no matter how overheated we become, no matter what exercise we take, we will remain dainty and fastidious.

With improvements in modern deodorants and antiperspirants there's no excuse or reason for anyone neglecting this important step. I know of a cream deodorant which is simple to use and takes only a minute. All you do is rub a small amount over the area to be protected. Rub it in with your fingertips, and that's that. The cream deodorizes and stops perspiration for from one to three days.

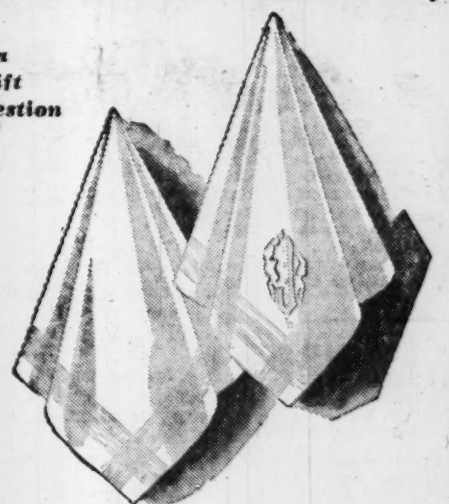

It's a clean white cream which disappears into the skin, leaving no sticky or greasy traces. It won't stain or harm clothing, so you can use it right before dressing, without a bit of worry.

The cream is so mild that people use it who, up to now, haven't been able to use any other form of antiperspirants. Yet, it gives complete protection for from one to three days, according to the individual.

This cream deodorant has so many other talking points that it's surprising to find it has price ap-

PITCHERS FEAR THIS CUB—The most feared batter in the National League is Big Bill Nicholson, who sports only a .250 batting average. The Chicago outfielder, for whom the Cubs paid Joe Engel, Chattanooga Lookout prey, $35,000, leads the senior circuit in runs batted in with 49 and has clouted 12 home runs. The six-foot Maryland boy, who bats left-handed and throws right, socked a homer with two on against the Giants yesterday.

heard about it and has conclusive evidence as to why the signs are necessary. Davis sends the following clipping from an Ocala paper—

"Herman Fore, an employee of the Central Truck and Tractor Company, was suffering only minor bruises today following a head-on collision with a deer in the Ocala National Forest last night. The car in which Fore was riding alone turned over after crashing into the deer about five miles from Salt Springs, killing the deer. According to a witness, Fore was coming over the top of a hill and had no time to avoid hitting the deer which was feeding in the middle of the road."

Quips Clint Davis, "You laughed at the 'deer-warning' signs in the forest—bet this guy will respect them in the future."

Lefty at Third Harold Foreman, demon statistician of the Howe News Bureau, which supplies official averages for the Southern League, likes the New Orleans Pelicans as a dark horse.

Foreman says: "The Pels, with an entire new outfield from the one with which they started the season, are beginning to hit their stride and you can look for Ray Blades' gang to stage a typical Gas House Gang drive down the stretch."

The most unusual feature of the Pelican outfit is the fact that a left-handed first baseman, Jack Bolling, is playing third base. The Pels are the only team in organized baseball with a southpaw at the hot corner. Bill Seinoth, a pitcher, is playing first base. Incidentally, Bolling has handled 16 out of 18 chances perfectly at third base.

Angler Hemingway Ernest Hemingway, America's leading triple-threat writer who today begins a series of informative articles on the Far East in The Constitution, claims considerable distinction as a big-game fisherman.

Moise Kaplan, prominent Atlanta sportsman and insurance man who has written a splendid book on fishing, has had the pleasure of being with Hemingway on big-game fishing expeditions.

Selma Paced By Alexander In 7-5 Victory

MONTGOMERY, Ala., June 10.—Selma's manager, Dale Alexander, who mapped his strategy and then proceeded to carry it out in the 12th inning, drew praise from fans of the second-place Southeastern League club today.

With the score between the Leafs and Aniston's Rams tied 5 to 5 in the third extra inning, Alexander entered the match as a pinch hitter last night and singled to place Lane in scoring position. Men's fly to center then brought him home and the Leafs went on to win, 7 to 5.

The lengthy clash saw the winners drive out 18 hits off DeForge and Kohlman while the Rams got to Watigny, Pritchard and Scarborough for 17.

Mobile continued its winning streak by chalking up number 10 with a 7-to-5 decision over Meridian.

Two southpaws started out in the Montgomery Rebels-Gadsden Pilots clash, but only Jake Baker lasted and the Pilots took a 7-to-3 victory.

A three-run barrage in the fifth inning gave Pensacola a narrow 4 to 3 win over Jackson's Senators.

Wildlife Meet In Macon Draws State's Leaders

Federation Opens 2-Day Convention as Directors Map Program.

MACON, Ga., June 10.—Drouth and defense gave 'way to wildlife here today as directors of the Georgia Wildlife Federation, organization campaigning for a commission-director setup in the State Wildlife Division, began arriving here for a two-day session in the Dempsey hotel.

The first annual convention of the federation will open here this afternoon when the 16 directors hold a meeting to map plans for organization work following the all-day meeting of federation members and clubs, and "all persons interested in conservation" Thursday.

Representatives of the federation expressed hope that nearly 500 delegates would be present at the convention. Approximately 65 clubs will be represented, it was announced.

Conservation leaders and officials, including Herbert Stoddard, of Thomaston; H. S. Swingle, of Auburn, Ala.; Attorney General Ellis Arnall; Clint Davis, of Atlanta; Zach D. Cravey, wildlife director; Dr. Edward Cresser, of Savannah; Sidney C. Jones, of Waynesboro; W. H. McNaughton, of Cartersville, and others will speak Thursday.

Officers of the federation will be chosen following the program that day, which will be featured by open forums airing the wildlife problems which face Georgia at the present time.

The federation repeated its call for "every sportsman and farmer seeking to improve hunting and fishing conditions" to be on hand for the discussions.

"We face a long campaign to accomplish our aims," the directors said, "and we need the suggestions and support of everybody involved."

Sharp Shootin' by AL SHARP

Texas Round-Up. Only man who could have broken the record of 281 in the National Open is Superman, and he wasn't there. The rain Friday was tough, but oddly enough Sneed, with a 70, and Wood, the winner, bettered their Thursday scores. Wood had 71 that day and followed up with a pair of 70's when the course had not dried.

John Carter, Fox World publisher, received an autograph seat from the press. It came out of one of those places you used to see behind the little red schoolhouse. . . . Few guys have ever been honored with such a token of esteem. . . . The press is becoming a tradition, with newspapermen giving it only to those they liked an awful lot.

This dub stood the Texas sun, what there was of it—all right, but driving back lost so much weight he could get in last summer's trousers for the first time. . . . A blessing in disguise, as the guys with so much wit would say.

Hogan was playing 'em safe the first two days. As a result when he opened up with 69-70 on the last day, it was a bit late. . . . Hogan, you know, figures courses the safe way. He maps his strategy in practice, plans for birds on certain holes and plays the course safe. This time he missed the birdies and could not do any good with the safe ones—that is, until he started gambling that last day. . . . And don't forget that his methods have paid big dividends.

On the last two rounds, the champion, Craig Wood, sank putts of 40, 26, 10, 25 and 30 feet. His putter was working well, as it must when you win such a competition. . . . If Dutch Harrison had played a good round in the rain, he might have won. Dutch had 70-71-71-71. . . . Everything is so big in Texas that you can even see the chiggers. . . . Ask some of the Yankee reporters if you don't believe that one, or come by and we'll show you some of their bomb shelters.

Chaplain of Famous Combat Squadron Says Boys Worry More About Sweetheart

(This is the last of two articles describing a famous RAF combat squadron in action, written by a noted American author who has just returned from England with his daughter, Mrs. Robert Lanchester, whose husband, an RAF pilot, was killed in a crash several weeks ago.)

By ERNEST POOLE

For North American Newspaper Alliance. NEW YORK, June 10.—As I sat with their leader that day in the quarters of the British fighter squadron which has downed some 200 enemy aircraft, fighters and bombers, in this last year, and we watched them reading, smoking and listening to songs from "Show Boat" on their radio, the squadron leader continued his stories:

"I told you that, except when on leave, these lads leave hard liquor strictly alone, for they're dealing with high power and at 360 miles an hour you need all the head you've got. But that lean kid just opposite got very thoroughly tight last week through pottering about in the sea.

"In a battle over the Channel, he got two Jerries but a third gave him a burst and down he crashed. He bailed out and dropped in a damned cold sea. After floating till frozen, he was picked up by one of our mine-sweepers and the crew gave him a good stiff drink of rum, then took him to the nearest port, with so many other mine-sweepers there that our air hero had to walk across five or six to get to the pier.

And since he was still wet and cold, the generous crew on each sweeper grabbed him and poured in more rum. When at last he got back here to report, he mumbled: 'Here I am, sir, tight as hell. But blame those mine-sweepers—not me!'

Stories of Squadron.

"Want any more stories?" Your pencil looks hot," I begged him to go right ahead. "Then here are two more and then we're through. Watch that lad who's listening to your Yankee 'Show Boat' love songs with sweet dreams in his young eyes. Last week at twenty angels (thousand feet) he was given a burst, bailed out and came through clouds head first.

"He'd pulled his rip cord but could feel his parachute had failed to open and, when he got below the clouds, he saw that the cord had got tangled in his boots. But in the next five angels he took his boots off and freed the cord, his parachute opened and he was o. k." I looked at his leader with a grin and coldly unbelieving eyes.

"Just how," I asked, "could he take his boots off while he was falling through the sky?"

"But my dear chap, you fall at only 120 miles an hour—so when you've been going at 360, when you fall, you slow right down!"

"Stringing me, aren't you?"

"So help me God, no!"

"Let's have the last story."

Pigmy Pilot's Plight.

"There it is." The squadron leader smiled across the smallest boy in the room who sat scowling at an American magazine. "He so hates to be kidded about his size that he's still sore at the laugh we had on him two weeks ago.

"In a squadron action above the clouds, after our lads had downed three of the enemy, a Jerry got this one's aircraft, so turned over and bailed out. Down through thick cold clouds he tumbled, pulling his rip cord as he went. The parachute opened and slowed his fall but below the clouds a belt of hot air caught his chute and up again he sailed into the cold fog above!

"I'd sent down a lad to see how he was. The lad saw him soar and reported to me, so down we all went. Six times we watched that poor little devil, light as a feather and sore as hell, drop into that hot belt and sail up again into the clouds—with the whole squadron circling around and laughing our heads off!"

The squadron leader had finished his yarns.

"What do they call you?" I asked him.

"The Old Man."

"How old are you?"

"Old Man" is 31.

"Thirty-one." I closed by notebook. "Thanks a lot. Now may I see the doctor and chaplain?"

"Religion and science? We'll track them down."

In a car we found the doctor first and I asked him if the men's blood pressure was high.

"Not at all, they're perfectly normal," he told me, "in blood pressure, temperature and pulse. All tough except when they take colds. I have to lay them right up then, for at twenty angels or more a cold in the head has a way of leaping right for the ear-drums and starting a mastoid. Nasty, that."

But otherwise high altitudes have little or no effect on these boys, for they are all of them careful to get all the oxygen they need. At 10 angels, they will set the oxygen gauge for 15—and at 15, for 20 and so on up.

"Any honest lad will admit that he gets scared in a job like that—and any number of ours have told me: 'Doc, in every action upstairs I'm scared as hell till I get on his tail—but in the three seconds after that, it's the grandest sport on land or in sky!'

"The boys are tough. Even nerves like theirs crack up in a few months, but after a couple of weeks of rest they recover and get back up again."

Heaven Is Dangerous.

I saw the chaplain and he said: "Many of them come to me with all kinds of secret worries, not about their jobs upstairs, but about problems back at home. One of the wildest sky fighters here is worried to death because back at home the girl he's engaged to is going to night clubs with a young pilot who is a Pole. Oh, how our lad does hate that Pole!"

"Do they ever ask about their chances of any heaven if they are killed?"

The chaplain smiled: "No, that is a question they leave alone. Heaven is dangerous nowadays. Better not think about it too much. You've got a job to put through up there for England, so you scramble up when you get the command. But as to what happens up there now and then—well, as Shakespeare once remarked: 'And the rest is silence.' The RAF treats death like that."

HIGHWAYS TO BE FENCED.

Several state governors of Mexico have pledged themselves to have highways fenced in without delay. The pledges have been given as a result of much public agitation against permitting cattle on the roads. Itinerant livestock have caused many serious automobile accidents.

U. S. Expects Grave Winter Coal Shortage

Lack Caused by Defense, Householders Urged To Buy Now.

WASHINGTON, June 10.—(AP) Anticipating "very grave danger of a shortage" of coal next winter, the government urged householders throughout the country tonight to "buy winter coal now."

At the same time Secretary Ickes removed the qualification "probably" from forecasts of an oil shortage and said definitely that easterners "will have to get along with gasoline for their cars and probably less oil to heat their homes." No indication was given, however, as to when restrictions would be imposed.

Both coal and oil shortages are threatened—not by lack of supplies but by the demands the defense program is making on transportation facilities. The coal shortage may be avoided, officials said, if the campaign for summer buying succeeds.

The appeal to "buy winter coal now" was issued by the Warrenton ment agency established to protect bituminous coal users, said that "it is extremely important to get this coal moved this summer. If consumers do not buy now they may be in trouble later."
